4 seized in Madrid burglary

NEW MADRID — Items valued between $1,200 and $1,400, which were stolen Oct. 1 in a break-in at Bootheel Gin, 300 Virginia St., were recovered Tuesday and four suspects are in custody for investigation as the result of a cooperative effort by the New Madrid County Sheriff's Department and city police.

Names of the suspects, who range in age from to 17 to 20 years, were not disclosed, pending filing of charges.

According to City Marshal Virgil "Flip" Dees, about $600 worth of tools and a calculator which had been sold since the burglary, were recovered and an adding machine and check-writing machine were later found in an alley behind Russell Street.

A tape player, believed to have been one reported stolen from a car, was also recovered.

Farmington man arrested for bad checks

Benjamin Ted Harrold, 49, of Farmington apparently will not make it to the Salvation Army Men's Social Club in Miami, Fla., having been detoured to the Sikeston city jail following his arrest at 5 p.m. Monday for cashing bogus checks.

Harrold was on parole from St. Francois County and had been given written permission to go to Florida to live. Police say he has eight previous arrests for passing bad checks.

Detective Sgt. Dan Hinton said Harrold was arrested after the police department received reports of a man going around town trying to cash what appeared to be a bogus check.

Sinai-U.S. details being worked out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private American contractors under U.S. government supervision would hire the civilian technicians to operate the Sinai desert early-warning stations, according to preliminary plans.

President Ford, having signed a joint congressional resolution authorizing up to 200 American civilians to be stationed in the Sinai, now is moving to get the operation underway. His final decisions on the mechanics of the U.S. role will be made "relatively soon," a White House official said.

The role for private American contractors is among key proposals in a National Security Council memo being prepared for Ford to put the Israeli-Egyptian agreement into effect.

Administration sources say the President will make his decisions after receiving the NSC memo with options provided by a number of federal agencies, including the State Department, the Pentagon and the Office of Management and Budget.

Congressional sources say the idea of private American contractors appears to be a key proposal on which there is little opposition. Two basic options involve how the U.S. government will oversee the operations — whether through a small interagency task force, like the one set up to handle Vietnam refugees, or whether the job will be handled solely by the State Department or its Agency for International Development (AID).

According to the agreement Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger worked out with Egypt and Israel, the American-manned electronic warning stations will start operating by Feb. 22.

"We don't plan to have anyone in there until some time in January," said an U.S. official involved in the planning.

Meanwhile, some Americans have reacted enthusiastically to the idea of serving in the peacekeeping operation.

A State Department spokesman said over 800 applications have been received from civilians seeking the jobs, including 200 letters turned over by congressmen from their constituents.

Salaries around $40,000 a year have been mentioned as incentive pay to get highly trained personnel to serve in the lonely desert outposts.

Natural gas shortage expected this winter

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a growing natural gas shortage expected this winter, the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled out a tactic which the Federal Power Commission considered its best hope of providing any immediate relief.

By barring 180-day exemptions from federal price controls on natural gas, the court left it squarely up to Congress to decide whether to permit such exemptions which in effect temporarily lifted the price controls that are blamed by the natural gas industry for shortages.

Even if Congress takes action later this year to permit the exemptions, however, that would provide only partil relief for the expected shortages.

The Federal Energy Administration estimates that temporary exceptions from federal price controls would make it possible for interstate pipelines to buy an additional 200 billion to 400 billion cubic feet of gas this winter at unregulated prices up to three or four times as high as the federal ceiling price.

But this is only a fraction of the total shortage, forecast at about 2.9 trillion cubic feet.

Meanwhile, concerned about suspicions that some producers or pipelines may not have been trying as hard as they could to meet their contract obligations for gas deliveries, the FPC announced Tuesday that it will crack down on any who are unnecessarily reducing their deliveries.

The FPC did not cite any specific examples, but said such questions have arisen through congressional hearings "as well as in the day-to-day administratration" of the Natural Gas Act by the FPC.

The FPC said it will hold pipelines and gas producers responsible for delivering their obligated amounts of natural gas or explaining why they can't. When appropriate, the FPC said it will take administrative action or go to court to enforce gas delivery obligations.

Gas shortages have been growing since about 1971. Both the industry and members of the FPC, including outgoing chairman John N. Nassikas, have blamed them on the legal requirement that the FPC regulate the price of interstate gas sales.

They say this has diverted much of the natural gas away from the interstate market, to the higher-price intrastate market which is outside federal regulation.

In an effort to give the pipelines more of the gas available on the unregulated market, the FPC permitted "emergency" purchases without price ceilings for as long as 180 days during the heating season of 1973-1974.

The spokesman said some 196 billion cubic feet of gas were purchased under 180-day exemptions that season. But the procedure was challenged by the Consumer Federation of America, the American Public Gas Association, the American

Malden site to house ambulances purchased

MALDEN — Property at the corner of Main and Decatur Streets was purchased by the City Council for $50,000 Monday night as a site to house ambulances and a rescue truck, City Clerk Roscoe Thornton said today.

The city will pay $4,000 per year, plus five per cent interest, for the property, Thornton said.

Kenneth Hampton, in charge of a program to be presented at the grand opening of the Malden Community Building, told the council a problem has developed with the sound system.

The sound stays on the stage and will not carry, he said. The council allowed the community building committee up to $1,500 to make needed improvements.

Thornton said no date has yet been set for the grand opening of the building, which has been under construction for over a year at a reported cost of about $400,000.

A bid to pave Merritt Street was accepted from Tommy V. Bryant at a cost of $3.85 per running foot. Two other bids included Baker Excavating Co., $2.25 per square foot, and Dewey Bryant, $4.50 per running foot.

The bids were on blacktop for a 20-foot wide street and 632 feet long.

A zoning change from commercial -1 to commercial -2 was approved for an area extending north along Highway 25 from Peck Street, east on Broadwater Road to the Cotton Belt Railroad tracks, then south back to Peck

Defense bill explained

CHAFFEE — In discussing the defense budget before the Rotary Club Tuesday night, 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Cape Girardeau, noted that the House of Representatives has just passed the defense appropriation bill for fiscal year 1976 and that the bill is now under consideration by the Senate.

The congressman pointed out that there were three principal points of contention during debate on the floor of the House. First, the committee has reduced the recruiting budget by approximately $87 million. About $37 million of this reduction was in recruiting advertising.

Burlison said the main argument of the committee was that the present employment situation is such that the service branches have more than enough young people who want to join. Another effective argument was that the services were wasteful in their billboard and magazine advertising.

A second controversy revolved around whether funding for the Central Intelligence Agency or other intelligency community agencies should be made public. The committee's position was that it should not because it would permit potential enemies to pinpoint our intelligence efforts.

Finally, Burlison briefly touched on the issues involved in selection of the F-18 as the Navy's new lightweight fighter for the 1980s. He said the Navy made "a forceful and persuasive case in showing the need for the fighter. The clear superiority of the McDonnell-Douglas candidate over the LTV entry was also conclusively shown."

The F-18 will be produced in St. Louis, he added.

Sikeston School Board told

Job market for nurses unfilled

Graduates of the health occupations classes are having no difficulty finding jobs, Clare Eisenbach, director of the Health Occupations Department told the Sikeston R-6 Board of Education Tuesday.

Mrs. Eisenbach told the board she does not see any saturation point yet in the licensed practical nurse job market.

The department has graduated 338 nurses from its 13 completed classes.

In other action, Supt. Sam Harbin told the board the district is revising its budget for the coming year because of possible changes in income.

Harbin said the budget was adopted before the district had complete knowledge of the amount of state financial aid it will receive.

Since then, Harbin said the system has been told to expect a three per cent cut in state aid and that the School Foundation formula may be changed.

The new budget reflects the changes, Harbin said.

The board voted to ask bids on a small four-room frame home on school property on South Ingram Street.

The house must be moved from the site after being purchased, so the school system can build a storage building there.

The board tabled a motion to update its policy on maternity leaves from allowing the teacher to return after pregnancy when there is an opening in the system to guaranteeing her position for a reasonable length of absence.

The system is already following the change and the board's action will conform policy to recent court rulings.

Bell City seeks funds for housing project

BELL CITY — An application for funds to finance a proposed 32-unit housing project has been submitted to Department of Housing and Urban Development, the board of education was told Monday night.

The board agreed in September to make about 3.5 acres available for the project, if funds were approved by the government, Supt. Golden Neeley said Tuesday.

The housing will be for the elderly and will be located on the south edge of town about two or three blocks from the school.

The Bell City Housing Authority is in charge of the project, Neeley said, and all the school agreed to do was make the land available. After the land is sold, it will have no say in the matter.

It may be sometime, however, before HUD makes a decision on the funds, Neeley said.

The board Monday night hired Darlene Clark of Bell City as secretary to Larry Shoaf, the elementary school principal.

Bernie school rooms to open

BERNIE — Seventh and eighth grade students in Bernie School District hopefully will move into a new addition at the high school before Christmas, Supt. Elmer "Doc" Dunn said Tuesday.

Plans are for the addition and another addition at the elementary school to be finished before Christmas.

Previously, students in kindergarten through sixth grade were grouped together; seventh and eighth grades were grouped together and students in the ninth and 10th grades were grouped together.

Under a new system adopted by the board of education Monday night, students enrolled in kindergarten through sixth grade will attend the elementary school and students in grades seven through 12 will attend the high school.

As a result of the change, there will no longer be an eighth grade graduation, Dunn said.

Don Lee, the high school principal, is conducting a survey this week concerning the dress code, Dottie Parrish, the board of education secretary, said Tuesday.

The main concern apparently is hair length, Mrs. Parrish said. Presently, the code allows hair on boys to be no longer than the shirt collar.

Results of the survey will be presented to the board, who will decide whether or not the present code should be liberalized.

A delegation headed by Mayor R. B. Woods asked the board to consider adding a football program to the present athletic program.

The board took no action on the proposal.

In other action, the board decided to ask for bids on new furniture for the elementary and high school additions, hired Doris Norman as bus driver and agreed to supply the Community Teachers Association with a copy of the minutes of each school board meeting.

Fans, cutting shears stolen

Four fans and a pair of angle iron cutting shears were stolen behind Hambrick Electric Co., 505 Greer St., sometime Monday evening or Tuesday morning.

Police said the items were setting outside the building when they were taken.

The four fans were valued $1,000 and the shears at $200.

Charleston council discusses

CD projects for 1976

CHARLESTON — The City Council Tuesday night discussed community development projects for 1976, heard requests for financial assistance from two agencies and adopted ordinances following a public hearing on the abandonment and rerouting of an alley in East Gate Addition.

Proposals discussed for 1976 community development funds included construction or renovation of the city swimming pool, an equitable housing assistance plan and construction of downtown public parking.

Tanna Parish, executive director of the Charleston Urban Renewal Project which administers community development funds, was directed to seek estimates on the cost of renovating the present pool, construction of a new pool at the present location and construction of a new pool on school property.

The council also discussed with Parish the need for regulations for the handling of housing assistance funds.

Also discussed was construction of a public parking lot in the downtown commercial area and elimination of parking meters.

Parish announced a public meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 20 in the junior high school in an effort to increase participation by the general public in the community development program.

A resolution calling for the advertising of two public hearings on proposed community development projects — one scheduled for the Nov. 11 council meeting and the other at 2:30 p.m. Nov. 13 in the Community Building — was approved.

Milla Lane, area coordinator for Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation, informed the council the agency had found other office facilities at 206 W. Pecan St. available for rent at $100 per month with a one-year lease. Mrs. Lane said the building, owned by Scott Mainord, was being remodeled at present and should be available by early November.

The council agreed to continue paying $75 a month on the rent, with the Chamber of Commerce paying the additional $25.

Representatives from the board of the Mississippi County Child Development Corporation day care center were present and requested financial assistance for the center's 1976 budget. According to Fred Gordon, center director, the budget for the coming year totaled $45,302 with local funds of $11,325 needed.

It was suggested that community development funds could be used to assist the agency. The council, however, expressed the opinion that other assistance should be sought since the city cannot be assured community development funds will be available beyond next year.

The city donated $1,500 to the program last year and indicated it would support the program again in the coming year but suggested that other groups and organizations be contacted for

Bell City seeks funds for housing project

BELL CITY — An application for funds to finance a proposed 32-unit housing project has been submitted to Department of Housing and Urban Development, the board of education was told Monday night.

The board agreed in September to make about 3.5 acres available for the project, if funds were approved by the government, Supt. Golden Neeley said Tuesday.

It may be sometime, however, before HUD makes a decision on the funds, Neeley said.

A PROPER CONCERN

The wife of a California newspaperman, with her husband's interested assistance, tested local grass roots opinion by circulating a petition. It received a friendly reception and ready signature from impressive numbers of people to whom it was presented.

The petition, in a "...spirit of Fair play and concern of the nation to keep a clean house in our governmental process...." requests that an investigation be made of every Senator and Congressman, their deputies, aides and appointees, beginning with the present Senate Watergate Committee to determine if they have anything in their background which would make them unfit to serve. The investigation would include a look into their income taxes, campaign contributions, medical and psychiatric background, bribery, felonies, and "...all other acts of moral turpitude and chicanery." Signed petitions, or copies of them, were sent to members of Congress including those on the Watergate investigation committee.

It is not likely that much will come of this, and it was not intended that much should. The purpose of the petition was to indicate that many people in the United States are concerned that no one in this country, including the President of the U.S., should be the victim of a lynch mob, a hanging judge or biased jury. Scandal and catastrophe make a better news story than anything else, and Watergate has been a gold mine of this kind of event. But still, many of the American people are concerned that the fitness of their President not be determined solely by major news media and political investigation.

PROFITS OR COMPULSION

President Gerald Ford made a most timely observation when he spoke critically of the "dangerous" notion that profits are inherently evil--that all who abhor profits are good guys and those who defend them are bad guys. his remarks are especially significant in light of the nearly hysterical outcry against the supposed excessive profits of the oil industry. These profits, of themselves, tell less than half the story about oil company earnings, and the whole story must be heard and understood if petroleum products are to again flow to consumers in a reasonably sufficient supply.

The public has been missing an essential part of the story in the ill-conceived uproar over profits. For example, the ability of an oil company to move ahead in a search for new domestic petroleum resources depends on profits. The ability to finance the development of those resources so that they will amount to more than mere statistics buried deep in the earth depends upon a satisfactory rate of return on the money--the capital--that is tied up in the business. It has been pointed out that despite 1973 increases in oil profits, the industry's rate of return on investment is lower than the comparable rate for all manufacturing. This means that the oil industry, in spite of its supposedly high profits, could well have tough sledding in attracting investors to put up the billions upon billions of dollars that will be needed to increase the petroleum output of the U.S. oil industry. Investors must see a chance of a return on savings just as good as they can get anywhere else if they are to put at the disposal of the oil industry the new capital that will be required.

It is little wonder that President Ford spoke a word of warning with respect to irresponsible attacks on profits. There will be adequate profits to encourage private investment, or there will be federally-run industry with compulsory taxpayer investment, as in the postal Service.

WHITE COLLAR CRIME

Those of us who believe in the importance of a free economy have been shocked and dismayed by disclosure that the executives of a few companies have given bribes in order to business abroad. In so doing, they have hurt the image of business generally and provided the critics of legitimate, law-abidding business with a stick to strike at free enterprise in the U.S.

Of course, the companies that offered bribes were only following a pattern laid out by the federal government. The government regularly dangles money under the noses of colleges, for instance, stating that the sums will be withheld if certain action aren't taken. Isn't this bribery, too?

Nevertheless, it is essential that everyone in business be more concerned about dishonesty in all its forms.

Edward J. Walsh of the U.S. Industrial Council recently analyzed the extent and impact of dishonesty. He cited "the housewife who slips small items of merchandise into her handbag, waitress who charges bills paid in cash to stolen credit cards...And all complacent in the notion that their isolated little dishonest acts aren't hurting anyone."

Mr. Walsh noted that there are numerous safeguards that can be used by business against internal crime "separation of responsibilities, frequent audits, thorough investigations of the work histories of prospective employes, more stringent inventory controls, are only a few."

Mr. Walsh commented that "the traditional standards of moral conduct which civilized society always assumed would protect it from the ravages of intelligent men consumed by greed, seemed to have paled somewhat--if they still matter at all." He cited these indicators:

1. The annual cost of embezzlement and pilferage reportedly exceeds by several billion dollars the losses sustained throughout the nation from burglary and robbery.

2. An insurance company reported that at least 30 per cent of all business failures each year are the result of employe dishonesty.

3. Fraud was a major contributing factor in the forced closing of about 100 banks during a 20-year period.

4. Dishonesty by corporate executives and employes has increased the retail costs of one company by up to 15 per cent, causing shareholders to suffer a paper loss of $300 million within just a few days.

Our society and our economic system cannot afford further moral fragmentation. Business leaders must take the initiative in emphasizing that there isn't any gray area between right and wrong. The preservation of a free economic system and a free society requires a strengthening of the traditions of decency, self-discipline and personal integrity.

The application of moral principles in the business dealings of life, first of all, must come in the everyday transactions of shop, office and factory.

A TEST FOR GOVERNOR CHRISTOPHER BOND

Governor Christopher Bond of Missouri has always given the impression that he is a broad-minded citizen of this state, ready at all times to take the right steps to see that justice is done in Missouri and that politics does not hold sway in this state.

Well, just how much does Governor Bond believe in those practices?

He already has shown that he is a politician just like all other politicians this state has had in the Governor's mansion in Jefferson City. About the only difference we see in Governor Bond and the Democrats who held the office prior to his administration is that former governors never tried to appear "holier than thou."

They were politicians, knew they were in politics and they played the game that way. Governor Bond is doing about the same thing but implying that his administration is not a political one.

Come this November, Governor Bond is going to be tested to the fullest. There will be a member of the Missouri State Highway Commission, Roger Linsin of St. Louis, whose term will be up on Dec. 1. His final meeting on the Commission could be the one in November.

This writer had the privilege to work for several years with Mr. Linsin on the Highway Commission. He was an outstanding member. He was a Republican member, but in those days politicis did not play a part, other than three members had to be Democrats and three members had to be Republicans.

That was the only "politics played" on the Commission. Mr. Linsin, as was A.C. (Dub) Riley of New Madrid, Mo., a Democrat, was kicked off the Highway Commission for no apparent reason. Their successors were never confirmed. Later both Mr. Linsin and Mr. Riley returned to their posts on the Commission. They are serving now.

Will Governor Bond forget that Mr. Linsin brought a suit challenging his right to remove him from the Commission and see that Mr. Linsin serves another six years? He should because Roger Linsin knows highways and he knows what the Misssouri State Highway Commission is all about. The test will be made of governor Bond.

KEEP INITIATIVE AND FREEDOM

A veritable blizzard of national health insurance proposals are being debated in Congress this year. No longer is the question one of whether there will be some sort of national health plan but rather, when. Also the question remains of how far the American people wish to go toward total government domination of health care and destruction of the traditional doctor-patient relationship in favor of making doctors government-employed public servants.

Even as the debate and controversy over national health insurance preempts the headlines, the work of the medical profession to advance the cause of good health continues. A publication of the American Medical Association, "AMA Update," reports that most of the AMA's 1974 budget is to go for better medical care and better health. The AMA expects to spend over $37 million in 1974--about 10 percent more than in 1973 to achieve three major goals: better delivery of medical care services, higher quality medical care services and persuading Americans to be more mindful of their own health. In the words of "Update," "We've said it before, and we'll say it again: Our nation's total health bill--currently about $83 billion a year--could be reduced substantially, if people would simply smoke less, eat less, get more exercise, drive more carefully, and generally take better care of themselves."

"Update" also notes that almost half of the money required for AMA's programs in 1974 will come from the dues paid by physician members of the AMA. This is the kind of genuine voluntarism that produces high health standards. No government program that substitutes compulsion for voluntarism can produce the kind of enlightened medical progress that depends so much upon the basic principles of individual initiative and freedom of action. Preserving these principles is a paramount issue in the health care debate.

Responsible for Slaves? Labor Chiefs reject super seniority for Blacks and other minorities

SAN FRANCISCO — During all these recession months black leaders have been angrily denouncing the last-hired -- first-fired practice. For almost two years now national black spokesmen have demanded the reversal of the seniority system which they charged operates against black workers -- especially against the younger men and women.

And during all this time insiders expected the final confrontation. But the showdown never came. No black voice in or around the huge Civic Auditorium was raised in protest against what many delegates called "the art of the possible" in their program to help the blacks.

The massive convention just wouldn't have bought reverse seniority. The chairman, George Meany, wouldn't have bought what he has called "reverse discrimination." Black and white workers alike in the labor federation's 109 unions won't stand for being bumped from their jobs by younger, more recently hired, black workers, or, for that matter, by Chicanos, Spanish-surnamed employes, American Indians or women.

Not too long ago Meany put it bluntly when he said:

"To say that we've got to sacrifice our kids and our rights to take care of people who merely say that we've got to be employed because our skin is black, that is discrimination in reverse and we don't buy it."

Meany always lays it on the line but rarely has he spoken of the racial issue as he did in that conversation. It's worth putting on the record in the context of the recent AFL-CIO convention's concern with heavy joblessness.

"How would you feel if you worked in a factory and you had 15 years seniority and you had a contract?" Meany asked. "And you felt that you had to take care of your kids and your family and you were told that because you were white you were going to be disposed of in favor of a fellow with 15 years less seniority. I don't buy that at all."

Meany added that no one had the obligation to make such a sacrifice of a job.

With the characteristic acerbic candor which has made Meany one of the world's most outspoken men of power, he outlined the rationale for his opposition to the campaign for reversal of seniority in American industry and commerce.

"You're talking against human nature. You're saying to a 45-year-old white man with five kids that he's trying to educate, 'You're going to lose your job because a 22-year-old black man doesn't have your seniority, because he would have been hired when he was six years old' ... This is the kind of item I don't buy at all.

"I don't think that I'm responsible for the fact that people in this country 125 years ago went to Africa and brought people over here as slaves. That's not my responsibility at all. I wasn't around yet.

"My forebears weren't responsible. My ancestors were fighting for religious freedom in Ireland then; they were fighting for their lives too. And to say that I've got some responsibility to make up for discrimination that took place 120 years ago is nuts.

"And it's completely against human nature."

The biggest black drive for reverse seniority strongly denounced by Meany, and by delegates, is aimed at the construction trades' unions which report that at least one million of their members are jobless. And more to come, they say.

They counter the black drive, which has the hammering support of the congressional Black Caucus, with reports of the AFL-CIO's Operation Outreach functioning in 150 cities.

Construction union leaders say that scores of thousands of black workers have been and are being trained to be craftsmen in the highest paying trades – such as plumbers, steam fitters, electrical and sheet metal workers. Some union chiefs say it is difficult to convince some educated black youths to get into the building and construction training courses because the minority youth feel it is undignified to work with their hands. Yet in modern construction, especially where the big pay is these days, there is considerable need for literate young workers also proficient in mathematics.

In the closing hours of the convention there also was discussion of the drive for reverse seniority in the public sector. Cities everywhere are up against the wall. Layoffs are imminent everywhere. This isn't merely a New York City phenomenon.

Thus many black and minority workers with short seniority because they've been hired mostly in the past few years are the first now being laid off. This became a last-minute convention issue when William Lucy, national secretary treasurer and second in command of the 750,000-member American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, made a brief, futile fight for some modification of the last-hired -- first-fired principle in the public sector.

Lucy, who works in tandem with the big union's president Jerry Wurf, is the nation's highest black labor official. He ought to amend a resolution by including clauses which would have slowed the seniority system in public employment by taking into consideration the comparatively new "affirmative action" programs.

But Lucy's efforts were quickly and overwhelmingly defeated. Forthe vast bulk of American labor and its powerful unions, the seniority system is the basis of its strength and existence. This is the sentiment of all including such men as United Steelworkers of America president I. W. (Abe) Abel who believes any reversal of seniority would throw American industry into chaos. They feel strongly as Meany does -- no reverse discrimination.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON--The Federal Power Commission doesn't intend to let the truth stand in the way of its push for higher natural gas prices.

President Ford, the gas industry, and the top brass at the FPC have concluded that the producers need prices deregulated as an incentive to find more gas and stave off an anticipated shortage.

But there is only the industry's word to support the predictions of shortage. Indeed, the U.S. Court of Appeals has heard evidence that the gas companies are simply holding back their product until they get higher prices. The court ordered the FPC to determine if natural gas curtailments on the East Coast were deliberate or unavoidable.

FPC officials, therefore, have reluctantly instructed their staffs to find out whether the shortage really exists. A confidential study for the house Energy subcommittee states, however, that the FPC investigation is "doomed to failure."

The probe is "miserably understaffed," the study states, because FPC Chairman John Nassikas "has reassigned the more competent staff to work on deregulation."

Only two full-time people have been assigned to go through 109 crates of documents in the case. They have only one lawyer working with them, but he is also assigned to two other investigations.

The Commission has other natural gas probes under way, but they also suffer from understaffing.

One is supposed to determine whethere there is more gas available in wells that the industry has shut down, as some critics have alleged.

The FPC has received 50 volumes of technical material on the case from gas producers. The staff working on the investigation, therefore, asked Chairman Nassikas for an expert consultant to help them decipher the data.

Internal FPC memos show that the request was made in July. But two months and a flurry of memos later, Nassikas finally decided that the funds for a consultant were not available.

Nine months of staff work has gurgled down the drain, and the producers' side of the story has yet to be investigated.

Nassikas, apparently, is more interested in getting the gas industry higher prices. And those higher prices will mean higher utility bills for American consumers..

KENNERLY CONTROVERSY: The most controversial figure in the White House is turning out to be David Hume Kennerly, the former Associated press photographer whom President Ford personally chose to be his official lensman.

Kennerly, who is close to the Ford family and members of the international jet set, has brought some of the world's most glamorous figures to the White House, creating a few minor scandals in the process. He is also brash and does not hesitate to express his unsolicited views in White House policy councils.

He has thus managed to offend top Ford aides, who feel that a photographer's opinions on profund domestic and world affairs are scarcely worth listening to. Presidential Press Secretary Ron Nessen, say our White house sources, is particularly upset with Kennerly's antics.

In an effort to ease him out, therefore, top White House officials have begun spreading stories about Kennerly. One of the tales they have been whispering is that he accepted a $790, leather-encased edition of a new oil game called "Petropolis" from rock music superstar Mick Jagger.

This would be a gross violation of a White House regulation which forbids any official from accepting a gift valued in excess of $25. Kennerly, moreover, is on friendly terms with Jagger's jet set wife, Bianca. On its face, therefore, the story appears credible.

We carefully checked the story and found it to be only partially true. Kennerly was indeed given a Petropolis game worth $790, but not by Jagger. It came instead from Baron Arnaud de Rosnay, another international socialite and the inventor of the game. Kennerly, to his credit, realized it would be improper to accept the gift, so he returned it.

Footnote: We made repeated calls to Kennerly for comment, but he never returned them.

WHITE COLLAR CRIME

Those of us who believe in the importance of a free economy have been shocked and dismayed by disclosure that the executives of a few companies have given bribes in order to business abroad. In so doing, they have hurt the image of business generally and provided the critics of legitimate, law-abidding business with a stick to strike at free enterprise in the U.S.

Of course, the companies that offered bribes were only following a pattern laid out by the federal government. The government regularly dangles money under the noses of colleges, for instance, stating that the sums will be withheld if certain action aren't taken. Isn't this bribery, too?

Nevertheless, it is essential that everyone in business be more concerned about dishonesty in all its forms.

Edward J. Walsh of the U.S. Industrial Council recently analyzed the extent and impact of dishonesty. He cited "the housewife who slips small items of merchandise into her handbag, waitress who charges bills paid in cash to stolen credit cards...And all complacent in the notion that their isolated little dishonest acts aren't hurting anyone."

Mr. Walsh noted that there are numerous safeguards that can be used by business against internal crime "separation of responsibilities, frequent audits, thorough investigations of the work histories of prospective employes, more stringent inventory controls, are only a few."

Mr. Walsh commented that "the traditional standards of moral conduct which civilized society always assumed would protect it from the ravages of intelligent men consumed by greed, seemed to have paled somewhat--if they still matter at all." He cited these indicators:

1. The annual cost of embezzlement and pilferage reportedly exceeds by several billion dollars the losses sustained throughout the nation from burglary and robbery.

2. An insurance company reported that at least 30 per cent of all business failures each year are the result of employe dishonesty.

3. Fraud was a major contributing factor in the forced closing of about 100 banks during a 20-year period.

4. Dishonesty by corporate executives and employes has increased the retail costs of one company by up to 15 per cent, causing shareholders to suffer a paper loss of $300 million within just a few days.

Our society and our economic system cannot afford further moral fragmentation. Business leaders must take the initiative in emphasizing that there isn't any gray area between right and wrong. The preservation of a free economic system and a free society requires a strengthening of the traditions of decency, self-discipline and personal integrity.

The application of moral principles in the business dealings of life, first of all, must come in the everyday transactions of shop, office and factory.

A TEST FOR GOVERNOR CHRISTOPHER BOND

Governor Christopher Bond of Missouri has always given the impression that he is a broad-minded citizen of this state, ready at all times to take the right steps to see that justice is done in Missouri and that politics does not hold sway in this state.

Well, just how much does Governor Bond believe in those practices?

He already has shown that he is a politician just like all other politicians this state has had in the Governor's mansion in Jefferson City. About the only difference we see in Governor Bond and the Democrats who held the office prior to his administration is that former governors never tried to appear "holier than thou."

They were politicians, knew they were in politics and they played the game that way. Governor Bond is doing about the same thing but implying that his administration is not a political one.

Come this November, Governor Bond is going to be tested to the fullest. There will be a member of the Missouri State Highway Commission, Roger Linsin of St. Louis, whose term will be up on Dec. 1. His final meeting on the Commission could be the one in November.

This writer had the privilege to work for several years with Mr. Linsin on the Highway Commission. He was an outstanding member. He was a Republican member, but in those days politicis did not play a part, other than three members had to be Democrats and three members had to be Republicans.

That was the only "politics played" on the Commission. Mr. Linsin, as was A.C. (Dub) Riley of New Madrid, Mo., a Democrat, was kicked off the Highway Commission for no apparent reason. Their successors were never confirmed. Later both Mr. Linsin and Mr. Riley returned to their posts on the Commission. They are serving now.

Will Governor Bond forget that Mr. Linsin brought a suit challenging his right to remove him from the Commission and see that Mr. Linsin serves another six years? He should because Roger Linsin knows highways and he knows what the Misssouri State Highway Commission is all about. The test will be made of governor Bond.

KEEP INITIATIVE AND FREEDOM

A veritable blizzard of national health insurance proposals are being debated in Congress this year. No longer is the question one of whether there will be some sort of national health plan but rather, when. Also the question remains of how far the American people wish to go toward total government domination of health care and destruction of the traditional doctor-patient relationship in favor of making doctors government-employed public servants.

Even as the debate and controversy over national health insurance preempts the headlines, the work of the medical profession to advance the cause of good health continues. A publication of the American Medical Association, "AMA Update," reports that most of the AMA's 1974 budget is to go for better medical care and better health. The AMA expects to spend over $37 million in 1974--about 10 percent more than in 1973 to achieve three major goals: better delivery of medical care services, higher quality medical care services and persuading Americans to be more mindful of their own health. In the words of "Update," "We've said it before, and we'll say it again: Our nation's total health bill--currently about $83 billion a year--could be reduced substantially, if people would simply smoke less, eat less, get more exercise, drive more carefully, and generally take better care of themselves."

"Update" also notes that almost half of the money required for AMA's programs in 1974 will come from the dues paid by physician members of the AMA. This is the kind of genuine voluntarism that produces high health standards. No government program that substitutes compulsion for vo'untarism can produce the kind of enlightened medical progress that depends so much upon the basic principles of individual initiative and freedom of action. Preserving these principles is a paramount issue in the health care debate.

Responsible for Slaves? Labor Chiefs reject super seniority for Blacks and other minorities

SAN FRANCISCO — During all these recession months black leaders have been angrily denouncing the last-hired -- first-fired practice. For almost two years now national black spokesmen have demanded the reversal of the seniority system which they charged operates against black workers -- especially against the younger men and women.

And during all this time insiders expected the final confrontation. But the showdown never came. No black voice in or around the huge Civic Auditorium was raised in protest against what many delegates called "the art of the possible" in their program to help the blacks.

The massive convention just wouldn't have bought reverse seniority. The chairman, George Meany, wouldn't have bought what he has called "reverse discrimination." Black and white workers alike in the labor federation's 109 unions won't stand for being bumped from their jobs by younger, more recently hired, black workers, or, for that matter, by Chicanos, Spanish-surnamed employes, American Indians or women.

Not too long ago Meany put it bluntly when he said:

"To say that we've got to sacrifice our kids and our rights to take care of people who merely say that we've got to be employed because our skin is black, that is discrimination in reverse and we don't buy it."

Meany always lays it on the line but rarely has he spoken of the racial issue as he did in that conversation. It's worth putting on the record in the context of the recent AFL-CIO convention's concern with heavy joblessness.

"How would you feel if you worked in a factory and you had 15 years seniority and you had a contract?" Meany asked. "And you felt that you had to take care of your kids and your family and you were told that because you were white you were going to be disposed of in favor of a fellow with 15 years less seniority. I don't buy that at all."

Meany added that no one had the obligation to make such a sacrifice of a job.

With the characteristic acerbic candor which has made Meany one of the world's most outspoken men of power, he outlined the rationale for his opposition to the campaign for reversal of seniority in American industry and commerce.

"You're talking against human nature. You're saying to a 45-year-old white man with five kids that he's trying to educate, 'You're going to lose your job because a 22-year-old black man doesn't have your seniority, because he would have been hired when he was six years old' ... This is the kind of item I don't buy at all.

"I don't think that I'm responsible for the fact that people in this country 125 years ago went to Africa and brought people over here as slaves. That's not my responsibility at all. I wasn't around yet.

"My forebears weren't responsible. My ancestors were fighting for religious freedom in Ireland then; they were fighting for their lives too. And to say that I've got some responsibility to make up for discrimination that took place 120 years ago is nuts.

"And it's completely against human nature."

The biggest black drive for reverse seniority strongly denounced by Meany, and by delegates, is aimed at the construction trades' unions which report that at least one million of their members are jobless. And more to come, they say.

They counter the black drive, which has the hammering support of the congressional Black Caucus, with reports of the AFL-CIO's Operation Outreach functioning in 150 cities.

Construction union leaders say that scores of thousands of black workers have been and are being trained to be craftsmen in the highest paying trades -- such as plumbers, steam fitters, electrical and sheet metal workers. Some union chiefs say it is difficult to convince some educated black youths to get into the building and construction training courses because the minority youth feel it is undignified to work with their hands. Yet in modern construction, especially where the big pay is these days, there is considerable need for literate young workers also proficient in mathematics.

In the closing hours of the convention there also was discussion of the drive for reverse seniority in the public sector. Cities everywhere are up against the wall. Layoffs are imminent everywhere. This isn't merely a New York City phenomenon.

Thus many black and minority workers with short seniority because they've been hired mostly in the past few years are the first now being laid off. This became a last-minute convention issue when William Lucy, national secretary treasurer and second in command of the 750,000-member American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, made a brief, futile fight for some modification of the last-hired -- first-fired principle in the public sector.

Lucy, who works in tandem with the big union's president Jerry Wurf, is the nation's highest black labor official. He ought to amend a resolution by including clauses which would have slowed the seniority system in public employment by taking into consideration the comparatively new "affirmative action" programs.

But Lucy's efforts were quickly and overwhelmingly defeated. Forthe vast bulk of American labor and its powerful unions, the seniority system is the basis of its strength and existence. This is the sentiment of all including such men as United Steelworkers of America president I. W. (Abe) Abel who believes any reversal of seniority would throw American industry into chaos. They feel strongly as Meany does -- no reverse discrimination.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON--The Federal Power Commission doesn't intend to let the truth stand in the way of its push for higher natural gas prices.

President Ford, the gas industry, and the top brass at the FPC have concluded that the producers need prices deregulated as an incentive to find more gas and stave off an anticipated shortage.

But there is only the industry's word to support the predictions of shortage. Indeed, the U.S. Court of Appeals has heard evidence that the gas companies are simply holding back their product until they get higher prices. The court ordered the FPC to determine if natural gas curtailments on the East Coast were deliberate or unavoidable.

FPC officials, therefore, have reluctantly instructed their staffs to find out whether the shortage really exists. A confidential study for the house Energy subcommittee states, however, that the FPC investigation is "doomed to failure."

The probe is "miserably understaffed," the study states, because FPC Chairman John Nassikas "has reassigned the more competent staff to work on deregulation."

Only two full-time people have been assigned to go through 109 crates of documents in the case. They have only one lawyer working with them, but he is also assigned to two other investigations.

The Commission has other natural gas probes under way, but they also suffer from understaffing.

One is supposed to determine whethere there is more gas available in wells that the industry has shut down, as some critics have alleged.

The FPC has received 50 volumes of technical material on the case from gas producers. The staff working on the investigation, therefore, asked Chairman Nassikas for an expert consultant to help them decipher the data.

Internal FPC memos show that the request was made in July. But two months and a flurry of memos later, Nassikas finally decided that the funds for a consultant were not available.

Nine months of staff work has gurgled down the drain, and the producers' side of the story has yet to be investigated.

Nassikas, apparently, is more interested in getting the gas industry higher prices. And those higher prices will mean higher utility bills for American consumers..

KENNERLY CONTROVERSY: The most controversial figure in the White House is turning out to be David Hume Kennerly, the former Associated press photographer whom President Ford personally chose to be his official lensman.

Kennerly, who is close to the Ford family and members of the international jet set, has brought some of the world's most glamorous figures to the White House, creating a few minor scandals in the process. He is also brash and does not hesitate to express his unsolicited views in White House policy councils.

He has thus managed to offend top Ford aides, who feel that a photographer's opinions on profund domestic and world affairs are scarcely worth listening to. Presidential Press Secretary Ron Nessen, say our White house sources, is particularly upset with Kennerly's antics.

In an effort to ease him out, therefore, top White House officials have begun spreading stories about Kennerly. One of the tales they have been whispering is that he accepted a $790, leather-encased edition of a new oil game called "Petropolis" from rock music superstar Mick Jagger.

This would be a gross violation of a White House regulation which forbids any official from accepting a gift valued in excess of $25. Kennerly, moreover, is on friendly terms with Jagger's jet set wife, Bianca. On its face, therefore, the story appears credible.

We carefully checked the story and found it to be only partially true. Kennerly was indeed given a Petropolis game worth $790, but not by Jagger. It came instead from Baron Arnaud de Rosnay, another international socialite and the inventor of the game. Kennerly, to his credit, realized it would be improper to accept the gift, so he returned it.

Footnote: We made repeated calls to Kennerly for comment, but he never returned them.

Prime Minister burglary victim

LONDON (AP) — Burglaries of official residences apparently are not just an American problem. Prime Minister Harold Wilson told the House of Commons that he has been the target of eight burglaries in recent years.

Shortly after his election in 1974, Wilson had revealed that some private papers, icluding tax documents, were taken from his private London residence in Lord North Street.

He said Tuesday that there were seven other burglaries earlier, but he didn't disclose any details.

Prime Minister burglary victim

LONDON (AP) — Burglaries of official residences apparently are not just an American problem. Prime Minister Harold Wilson told the House of Commons that he has been the target of eight burglaries in recent years.

Shortly after his election in 1974, Wilson had revealed that some private papers, icluding tax documents, were taken from his private London residence in Lord North Street.

He said Tuesday that there were seven other burglaries earlier, but he didn't disclose any details.

Stylish tricks with scarves

A contemporary head wrap combines two scarves. One is tied peasant-style, neatly covering the head and knotted in back. A contrasting print is twisted into a coil and wrapped around to tie in front.

By JEWEL GRADY

What to wear with what? This year, as in many years past, the big accessory key is scarves.

One new scarf that everyone will want is the sweater knitted triangle to tie at the throat in a square knot. Another popular scarf is the 35-inch square made of cashmere and silk and is used as a wrap. The long soft crepe dechine scarf that drapes so well as a wrap is an effective fashion item for the fall of '75. Fashion designer Patou has featured the soft wool tartan plaid shawl as a wrap for the returning skirt and sweater look.

When working with a scarf remember it is a piece of material. The most pleasing effect results when it is allowed to drape softly. It should never be pulled tight.

The history of the use of the scarf as part of a costume dates back to the Assyrian kings. Early history shows that it was worn by important rulers and that position of the wearer was indicated by the number, disposition and width of fringe.

Scarves were used in military uniforms in the 1600's. The scarf as female attire dated back to the 1700's. It was worn then as a sash at the waist. It was made of lace or sheer gauze in dark green, dark mulberry or black.

The versatile scarf is an essential fall accessory. Used in many different ways around the head, tied at the neck or worn as a wrap it is capable of many fashion tricks. In addition to the time-honored silk and wool fibers, varied synthetics and cotton blends have been used. Most of these fabrics are machine washable and the synthetics require little or no ironing.

Every fashion conscious woman will add some zing to her wardrobe by choosing and using scarves as an accessory.

A paisley scarf is twisted into a coil, then wrapped twice around the neck for a contemporary way to fill in a neckline.

Burton, Taylor wed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton were remarried last Friday afternoon at Kasane, in northern Botswana, the district commissioner's office in Chobe, Botswana, reported today.

The office said the actor and actress were married by District Commissioner Ambrose Masalila and that the marriage was officially registered in his office.

The office said Burton registered as Richard Walter Burton and Miss Taylor as Elizabeth Rosamund Taylor.

Miss Taylor, 43, and Burton, 49, were reconciled in Switzerland in August after 14 months of divorce. He is her fifth husband, she his second wife. They were married in 1964 after a romance that began when they were costarring in the movie "Cleopatra" in Rome.

They went to Botswana, north of South Africa, on Oct. 6 after a visit to Johannesburg for a celebrity tennis tournament for charity.

Getting married?

The Daily Standard, 205 S. New Madrid St., now has new wedding forms available at the front office or at the women's desk. Business hours are from 7 a.m., to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Forms will be mailed if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is provided.

The deadline for weddings is three weeks after date of wedding. Pictures will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope large enough to hold a picture is supplied. Color pictures are discouraged. There is no charge for running a wedding. We are happy to publish it.

Mosquitos are called 'nobody's fools' by Erma

By ERMA BOMBECK

I was lying in bed last night when I was awakened by a deafening roar of about 97 decibels overy my head. The entire bed shook as I clutched my bedsprings in fear.

A look at the ceiling confirmed my suspicious.

There was a mosquito in the bedroom.

My husband says I overreact to mosquitos. That is because he does not understand that my picture and full description is posted on the walls of a mosquito post office somewhere listed among the "TEN MOST WANTED."

During my lifetime, I have done a lot of thinking and scratching about mosquitos, haveing been savagely attacked by them on more than one occasion. They are nobody's fools.

In my heart I know that once I am spotted, if it is a male he whispers, "Go get her Mother." (Since only females need the blood to lay eggs.)

Mother defies description but she is somewhere between Ma Barker and The Fly That Ate The Poconos. She raises her right leg, which serves as a powerful antenna and is immediately in contact with a network of mosquitos throughout the world.

I have known messages of my whereabouts to be intercepted in South America ("Un Norteamericano el chubbo. Attack!"), Tokyo ("Kamikaze mosquitos man your samuria swords. Honorable target: Bombeck!), Germany ("Achtung meine Herren, spritz und weight watchers dropout, Soical Security number..."), and Chicago (("Get the turkey!).

Within minutes, there is a task force in the sky that makes the invasion of Normandy look like an impulse.

Those for whom mosquitos have no appetite are quick with the home remedies. I have basted by body with repellents only to have mosquitos line up like I was a revolving bowf of chip dip. On the advice of a friend, I tried garlic breath as a deterrent. ((The Italian mosquitos loved it and couldn't keep their needles out of me.)

Peeking out of the covers last night I could see several mosquitos positioned at 11 o'clock. It would only be a matter of seconds before they began to dive. In desperation, I put my curler bonnet on my husband and crawled on my hands and knees out of the bedroom.

There's no such thing as an honorable withdrawal.

Fashion designer Patou has featured the soft wool tartan plaid shawl as a wrap for the returning skirt and sweater look.

When working with a scarf remember it is a piece of material. The most pleasing effect results when it is allowed to drape softly. It should never be pulled tight.

The history of the use of the scarf as part of a costume dates back to the Assyrian kings. Early history shows that it was worn by important rulers and that position of the wearer was indicated by the number, disposition and width of fringe.

Scarves were used in military uniforms in the 1600's. The scarf as female attire dated back to the 1700's. It was worn then as a sash at the waist. It was made of lace or sheer gauze in dark green, dark mulberry or black.

The versatile scarf is an essential fall accessory. Used in many different ways around the head, tied at the neck or worn as a wrap it is capable of many fashion tricks. In addition to the time-honored silk and wool fibers, varied synthetics and cotton blends have been used. Most of these fabrics are machine washable and the synthetics require little or no ironing.

Every fashion conscious woman will add some zing to her wardrobe by choosing and using scarves as an accessory.

A paisley scarf is twisted into a coil, then wrapped twice around the neck for a contemporary way to fill in a neckline.

Burton, Taylor wed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton were remarried last Friday afternoon at Kasane, in northern Botswana, the district commissioner's office in Chobe, Botswana, reported today.

The office said the actor and actress were married by District Commissionfer Ambrose Masalila and that the marriage was officially registered in his office.

The office said Burton registered as Richard Walter Burton and Miss Taylor as Elizabeth Rosamund Taylor.

Miss Taylor, 43, and Burton, 49, were reconciled in Switzerland in August after 14 months of divorce. He is her fifth husband, she his second wife. They were married in 1964 after a romance that began when they were costarring in the movie "Cleopatra" in Rome.

They went to Botswana, north of South Africa, on Oct. 6 after a visit to Johannesburg for a celebrity tennis tournament for charity.

Getting married?

The Daily Standard, 205 S. New Madrid St., now has new wedding forms available at the front office or at the women's desk. Business hours are from 7 a.m., to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Forms will be mailed if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is provided.

The deadline for weddings is three weeks after date of wedding. Pictures will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope large enough to hold a picture is supplied. Color pictures are discouraged. There is no charge for running a wedding. We are happy to publish it.

At Wit's End

Mosquitos are called 'nobody's fools' by Erma

By ERMA BOMBECK

I was lying in bed last night when I was awakened by a deafening roar of about 97 decibels overy my head. The entire bed shook as I clutched my bedsprings in fear.

A look at the ceiling confirmed my suspicious.

There was a mosquito in the bedroom.

My husband says I overreact to mosquitos. That is because he does not understand that my picture and full description is posted on the walls of a mosquito post office somewhere listed among the "TEN MOST WANTED."

During my lifetime, I have done a lot of thinking and scratching about mosquitos, haveing been savagely attacked by them on more than one occasion. They are nobody's fools.

In my heart I know that once I am spotted, if it is a male he whispers, "Go get her Mother." (Since only females need the blood to lay eggs.)

Mother defies description but she is somewhere between Ma Barker and The Fly That Ate The Poconos. She raises her right leg, which serves as a powerful antenna and is immediately in contact with a network of mosquitos throughout the world.

I have known messages of my whereabouts to be intercepted in South America ("Un Norteamericano el chubbo. Attack!"), Tokyo ("Kamikaze mosquitos man your samuria swords. Honorable target: Bombeck!), Germany ("Achtung meine Herren, spritz und weight watchers dropout, Soical Security number..."), and Chicago (("Get the turkey!).

Within minutes, there is a task force in the sky that makes the invasion of Normandy look like an impulse.

Those for whom mosquitos have no appetite are quick with the home remedies. I have basted by body with repellents only to have mosquitos line up like I was a revolving bowf of chip dip. On the advice of a friend, I tried garlic breath as a deterrent. ((The Italian mosquitos loved it and couldn't keep their needles out of me.)

Peeking out of the covers last night I could see several mosquitos positioned at 11 o'clock. It would only be a matter of seconds before they began to dive. In desperation, I put my curler bonnet on my husband and crawled on my hands and knees out of the bedroom.

There's no such thing as an honorable withdrawal.

Chicken:

Four scrumptious ways

By CHERIE BLANTON

Gosh, with beef and pork gone sky high I guess there is not much left for us poor folks but the hen yard. And believe me, that is no chicken feed either. Here is one of my very favorite recipes I love to use when I entertain. I christened it with my uncle's name because I came across this delectable dish at his home.

DAVID'S CHICKEN

6 breasts, split and boned (makes 12 pieces) and skinned
1 bottle Sauterne wine
5 chopped green onions
2 cups chopped fresh (if possible) mushrooms
1 stick oleo
2 cans cream of mushroom soup

Put chicken in a large pot and add three-fourths of the bottle of wine and simmer for 12 minutes. Remove and save one and a half cups of the wine. Put onions in butter with mushrooms and saute. Then add soup and the wine and cook for a few minutes. Add some coarse ground black pepper and salt lightly. Put breasts in a shallow casserole and cover with the sauce. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Divine!

BUTTERMILK PECAN CHICKEN

2 fryers, cut into serving pieces
½ cup cooking oil
1 cup buttermilk
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 cup flour
1 cup ground pecans
1 Tbsp. paprika
1 Tbsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
¼ cup sesame seeds
¼ cup pecan halves

Melt margarine in large shallow baking pan (13x9x2). Mix buttermilk with egg in a shallow dish. Mix together flour, pecans, paprika, salt, pepper and seeds in another. Dip chicken in milk mixture, then in flour mixture. Place, skin side down in melted margarine in baking pan, then turn pieces to coat with margarine and leave skin side up. Place halves on each piece of chicken and bake at 350 degrees for one and a fourth hours or until done and golden brown.

CHEESE DELIGHT IN EVERY BITE CHICKEN

3 whole fryer breasts, halved, boned and skinned
1 clove garlic
½ cup melted oleo
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
½ cup finely grated sharp cheddar cheese
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper

Add garlic to oleo and let stand 20 minutes. Remove garlic. Mix together crumbs, cheeses salt and pepper. Dip breasts in oleo, then in crumb mixture. Place in large shallow baking pan, tucking sides under to form neat roll. Be sure pieces do not touch. Pour remainder of oleo over chicken. Bake uncovered at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or till done.

OVEN BARBECUE CHICKEN

1 fryer, cut in serving pieces
3 Tbsp. oil
1 medium onion, chopped
1 tsp. salt
2 Tbsp. brown sugar
1 Tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
½ cup water
3 tsp. vinegar
½ Tbsp. prepared mustard
1 can (15 ounces) tomato sauce

Heat oil in skillet; add chicken and brown on all sides. Remove from skillet and place in shallow baking pan. Add onion to oil in skillet and cook until brown. Add all remaining ingredients and simmer 30 minutes to make sauce. Pour sauce over chicken in pan and cover. Bake at 350 degrees for approximately 45 minutes or till done.

Ann Landers

Big stars make suckers out of waitresses, public

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the letter from the restaurant owner who didn't know what to do about those slobs who bought Chinese food at a carryout joint down the street, brought the cartons into his place, took a booth, and helped themselves to the salt and pepper, napkins, and silverware. They soiled the tablecloth, used the washroom, said goodbye and left no tip. The mess--including the floor--took fifteen minutes to clean up.

Of course these people are trash but how different are they, really, from the celebrities who bring their so-called "health food" to the most exclusive bistros in Hollywood? I've seen these Big Names take plastic sacks out of their tote bags, eat the carrots, lettuce, green peppers and radishes, order a glass of skim milk and get treated like queens.

The waiters knock themselves out for these people because they are well known. Why does the management overlook such nonsense? It irritates me no end. Please comment.--Resident of Beverly Hills, Cal.

Dear Beverly: The answer is found in your letter. "Because they are well known."

The patrons who frequent these bistros are willing to pay top dollar so they can go home and say they saw Gloria Swanson or Carol Channing.

Dear AnnLanders: I'm a 19-year-old girl who has been trying to deal with a problem for two years, but I'm getting nowhere. Will you please get it all together for me?

There were seven kids in our family. My oldest brother, Jeff, died in 1973, on his 21st birthday. Now there are six kids left--four boys and two girls.

Whenever I meet someone new they ask about my brothers and sisters. I don't know whether to say I have four brothers or five. I hate to leave Jeff out. Even though he is dead he is still very much a part of my life.

Please help me, Ann. I still get crying spells when I think of what a great guy he was.--Grieving Sister

Dear Grieving: Say, "There were seven kids in our family--five boys and two girls--until two years ago, when my brother Jeff died. He was 21. So now there are only six of us and we miss Jeff every day of our lives."

Less outdoor cooking lowers meat prices

Obviously due to cooler temperatures and less outdoor cooking demands for steak and chops, prices are slightly lower this week on major cuts of beef steak and pork chops, Missouri Farm Bureau shoppers' guide reports. With prices off as much as eight cents per pound on some items, retailers have lowered many cuts in line with steady to unchanged wholesale prices. The demand for beef and pork roast has made these usually economical cuts climb from 1 cent to eight cents, this week.

A seeming surprise is a 17-cent increase this week in sugar prices for a five-pound bag. Bread with less than five cents worth of wheat has again jumped and is averaging 60 cents for a one and a half pound loaf. A bag of red potatoes (10 pounds) has dropped six cents along with milk being down slightly this week. Fryers held steady, along with all sizes of eggs being unchanged.

Mrs. Reagan wavers over losing privacy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nancy Reagan says she is hesitant to give up her privacy again, but she says she won't try to stop her husband, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, from running for the presidency next year if that's what he really wants.

"There are things about politics I don't like," Mrs. Reagan said in a recent interview at the Reagans' Pacific Palisades home. "The lack of privacy ... and it's gotten so partisan and so — almost vicious. And that bothers me."

But she said if her husband, "in his best judgment, felt that he could perform a duty that he felt very strongly about, I can't imagine my ever saying, 'Absolutely no. I forbid you to do it.' I can't imagine myself doing that."

Reagan has said he will announce next month, probably a few days before Thanksgiving, whether he will run against President Ford in the Republican primaries.

He has described himself as "80 per cent convinced" he should run but has said he will not make a final decision until he completes a series of political soundings on three nationwide speaking tours during the next five weeks.

However, she said she cannot help but be less than enthusiastic about being the wife of a candidate.

"Particularly, in the climate of today, with all the 'Squeaky' Frommes (accused of attempting to assassinate President Ford), I think you can arouse people's emotions very easily, and set things into motion that you might not want to that might prove very dangerous," she said.

"There's a part of me that says, 'Gee, it would be nice to go to the ranch and lead a more private life, a more tranquil life.'

"I'm a very private person. That is an important part of me."

Silent art performed

By PAT GROJEAN

Mime is an art familiar to many only as performed by Marcel Marceau. It is a silent, ages-old art made modern by the ideas and feeling portrayed by the actors.

Sophie Wibaux and Bert Houle, two popular mime artists, have been introducing Sikeston and Dexter youths to mime and pantomime this week. They will present a longer program including both mediums at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Sikeston Activity Center, 201 S. Kingshighway.

To Sophie, mime is "acting without words." In their study guide, the two actors describe it as "a silent actor, alone, on an empty stage."

Mime is a medium which knows neither language barriers nor bounds of time and space. It differs from pantomime inthat it is more abstract, more symbolic, and has a theme rather than a story.

Following a performance of pantomime at Matthews Elementary School Monday, they explained that pantomime is usually lighthearted and comic, while mime tends to be more dramatic. The pantomime medium is performed in elementary schools because it is is often easier for the audience to understand with its more literal physical movements.

The purpose of mime is not so much to convey the story literally, but to reveal the symbolic meaning behind it. Houle explained that mime portrays a feeling or idea instead of a story.

Houle says he prefers mime to pantomime, in that it is more expressive of his ideas and feelings.

Mime is a disciplined craft, which requires muscle control, strength, grace and choreographed action. Even in watching the pantomime artist at work, it is clear how much muscle control is required.

During their performances, Miss Wibaux and Houle become very involved in the feeling. Involvement of the audience is also important to them while they perform. Houle explained that they can feel the heavy silence and concentration of an audience during a serious mime act. Of course, with comic pantomime, reaction of the audience by laughter is readily apparent.

The two performers, who have been together five years, prepare their own material. They met in the Paris studio of the distinguished Etienne Decroux, whose students included Marceau and Jean Louis Barrault.

Tiny, sandy-haired Sophie was a philosophy major at the Sorbonne when a friend's enthusiasm for mime led her to enroll with Decroux.

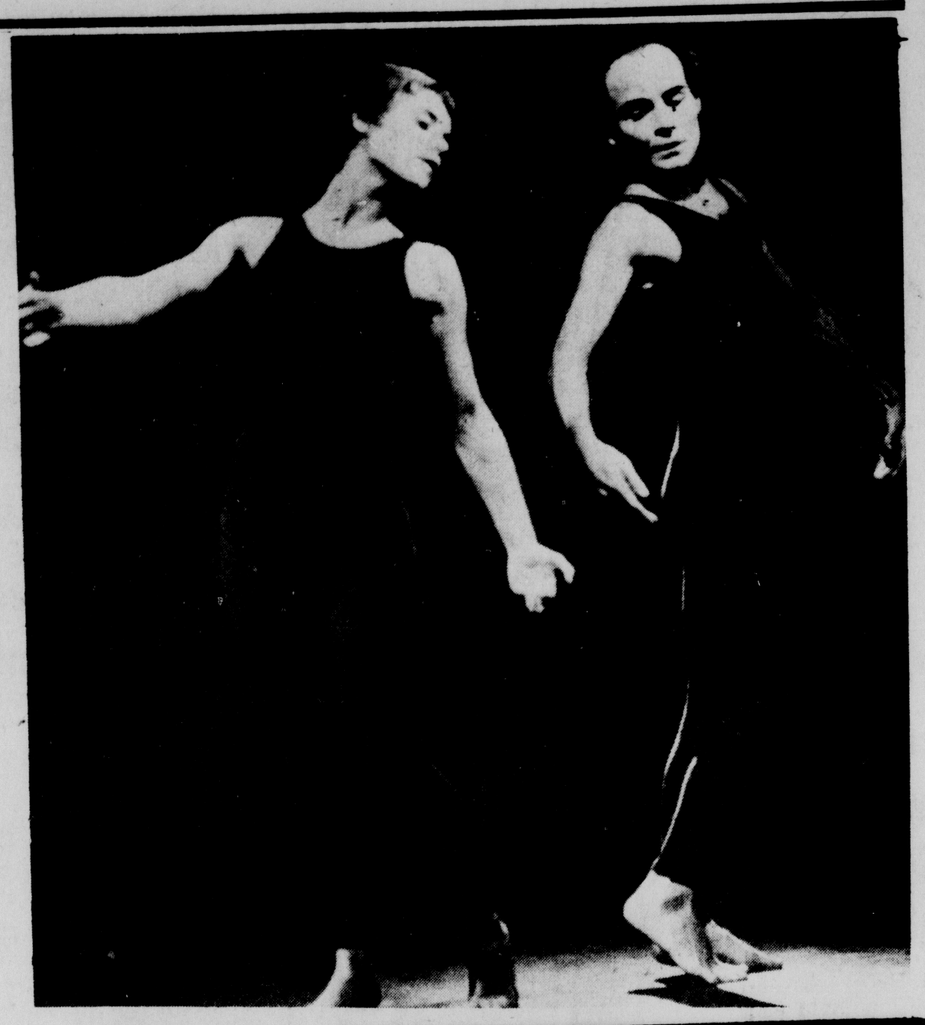
Bert, who is short with dark eyes, was an actor with several years of professional achievement before he applied for and received a Fulbright scholarship. He said he still does some acting, but prefers the silent world of mime, which he finds more expressive.

Both say they love their work, something that is very apparent as they perform and in talking to them following a performance. Audiences throughout the world have received them warmly, and Sikeston should be no different.

The actors held the attention of the children at Matthews Elementary School, and they responeded enthusiastically to this rather different art medium.

A lecture-demonstration was held after school today at the Sikeston Middle School, where the two actors explained and demonstrated their skills.

Tickets are available at Bank of Sikeston for the Thursday night performance, which will give those who attend a chance to experience a completely different acting mediu..



Estate planning seminar scheduled Thursday

An estate planning seminar, "The Mechanics of Will Preparation", will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Security National Bank Community room, 625 N. Main St.

The program is open to the public and is sponsored by the Eastern Missouri Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation.

Estate planning may help individuals save thousands of dollars in estate expenses and taxes.

A panel of attorneys will answer any questions from persons attending the meeting.

Unity

"Unity" is the title of one mime selection which will be performed Thursday night at Sikeston Activity Center, 201 S. Kingshighway, by Bert Houle and Sophie Wibaux, popular mime artists. The number, which is meant to portray a feeling of harmony, is one of many mime and pantomime skits the two actors will perform in the 7:30 p.m. show.

Mary Jane Thompson, 45, of 313 Prosperity St. decided to help Rena Marie Sills, Route Two, move her car about 11:45 a.m. Tuesday. After Mrs. Thompson got into the car the accelerator stuck and the car smashed into the front door of the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant in Midtowner Village Shopping Center. The accident damaged the doors and broke the glass windows. Mrs. Thompson was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital for treatment of minor leg and arm injuries but, after arriving, decided to see her own doctor.

Two arrests made in school break-in

DEXTER — Two arrests were made Tuesday afternoon in connection with a Sunday night break-in at the junior high school, police said today.

Billy Bishop, 17, and a younger boy were arrested about 3 p.m. Tuesday, and Bishop was charged with burglary and stealing. The other boy, whose identity is protected by juvenile laws, was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Bishop was placed in the city jail but was to be transferred to the Stoddard County jail at Bloomfield sometime today, police said.

A third suspect in the burglary is still being sought.

Police received the break-in report Monday morning when school officials noticed windows broken on the north side of the building. Nothing was reported missing, however, until Tuesday morning when it was discovered a cassette tape recorder, used in special education classes, a transistor radio, hydraulic winch and $15 in change from a soft-drink machine were missing.

Police said today that the recorder and winch had been recovered.

Juvenile Officer Melvin "Churn" Williams assisted police in the arrests.

East Prairie council approves of consolidation of drainage district

EAST PRAIRIE--The City Council Tuesday night approved paving of West Pine Street and instructed City Attorney Fielding Potashnick of Sikeston to draw up a resolution whereby the city will go on record in favor of a consolidated Circuit Court Drainage District for the floodway area.

Paving of West Pine Street will be done by a city crew at a cost of $5.50 per front foot by property owners along either side of the street. The city will pay the remaining $2.83 per foot from revenue obtained from the city's one-cent sales tax.

A petition from property owners opposing the paving was presented to the council but did not have the required majority of votes against the measure to petition the program out.

Potashnick was instructed to write a resolution stating the city's approval of the formation of the consolidated drainage district in the floodway area between the setback levee and the river levee. Some 55 landowners in the area filed objections to the proposal last week in Circuit Court.

The council agreed to let the Retired Senior Volunteer Program use the teen town building as the new location for its thrift shop. The building on Washington Drive, presently housing the shop, has been sold.

Rabbit schedules series of receptions in state

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri House Speaker Richard Rabbitt scheduled a series of receptions around the state today as part of his plans to file for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

Rabbitt, from St. Louis, announced plans to file Sept. 30 for the second time. He had initially said he planned to pay his filing fee in August.

Only one other person, St. Louis Democrat John McAllister, has filed for the post now held by Republican William Phelps, who has indicated he will probably seek a second term.

In response to Rabbitt's announced plans, Phelps issued a prepared statement today, saying that if he is re-elected he planned to "continue to be full time Phelps.

"By not practicing law as past lieutenant governors did, I have been able to help many people as a fulltime public servant," Phelps said.

Rabbitt is in the middle of his second term as speaker. He has served in the House since 1961.

Thornton said the difference between the two zone classifications is that under commercial -2 more is allowed than under commercial-1.

An ordinance was passed to require all city employes who work outdoors to wear safety shoes. The employes must buy the shoes by Jan. 1, 1976.

Thornton said that in the past year several incidents have occurred in which city employes have stepped on rusty nails. The safety shoes have a steel shank and toe.

Insurance bids were opened for buildings and contents owned by the city, but the matter was referred to the insurance committee for study and recommendations.

A proposed ordinance limiting the number of yard sales to one per family each year was tabled until the next meeting.

Also tabled was a request by Tom McGill, 311 E. Alley St., for the city to pay half the $500 cost of a lawn mower he had bought. He says he has mowed city property for the last 15 or 20 years, which adjoins his property.

No objections were voiced at a public hearing, held in conjunction with the council meeting, to the replatting of block six in the East Gate addition. The council adopted an ordinance abandoning an alley running east and west on property owned by Dewey Heppe. With the replatting, the alley will run north and south.

City Manager Willis Downs was authorized to seek bids on two intermediate sized 1975 police cars. A 1973 and a 1974 model will be used as trade-ins, and the council requested that automobile agencies out of town be contacted in order that more competitive bids might be received.

Downs informed the council he had received a request from owners of the Storming Bull restaurant for reimbursement of $300 paid for a liquor license for operation on Sunday. Downs said the restaurant had been turned down for a state license for Sunday sales. The council approved the reimbursement.

In other action, the council approved a trailer permit for Bob Grogan at 210 N. Heggie St. and was informed that the city had received a $26,343 revenue-sharing check. Also, Mayor William Knight signed a proclamation designating Oct. 21 as United Fund Day.

CHAFFEE — Mrs. Robert Knight, Scott County Retired Senior Volunteer Program director, was elected secretary of the state RSVP Directors Association and appointed to the legislative committee, while attending a directors meeting in Columbia Oct. 6-8.

The purpose of the legislative committee is to work for legislation to benefit older Americans.

The meeting consisted of work sessions on budget preparation, bookkeeping, policies and procedures.

Kiwanis Club views film on history of Upjohn Co.

The history and present activities of the Upjohn Co. were described in a film shown Tuesday night at the Kiwanis Club meeting in the El Capri Restaurant.

The film, "Upjohn Today", explained that the company was founded by W. E. Upjohn to manufacture pills, but has grown through the past 100 years into a company which now employs over 12,000 people who work in research in the fields of medicines for humans and animals and chemicals.

Clarence Cantrell, Route One, was a guest of the club. A progress report was made on the memorial for George Kirk at the city recreation facility.

$2 bill staging comeback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $2 bill, which disappeared almost a decade ago because of public disinterest, is staging a comeback in time for the Bicentennial, a congressman says.

Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., said today that he has learned that the Treasury Department plans to issue 400 million $2 bills annually. At the same time, the department will cut in half the current production of 1.8 billion $1 bills, Rosenthal said, citing a letter from Deputy Treasury Secretary Stephen S. Gardner.

Although the letter to Rosenthal indicated a final decision on reissuing the bill had been made, a Treasury spokesman said the decision was not yet final. The Treasury scheduled a public hearing later today to get views of consumers on whether they thought the bill would be well-received by Americans.

A portrait of Thomas Jefferson, the U.S. president whose picture was on the old issue of the $2 bill will probably adorn the new issue, it was learned.

The old $2 series was discontinued in 1966; the new bill would be issued in connection with the nation's Bicentennial observance.

Consumer disinterest in the $2 bill in the past was the chief reason it was taken out of circulation in 1966.

But Gardner said in an Oct. 10 letter to Rosenthal that studies, including a Harvard Business School survey, indicate that reissuance of the bill is "both feasible and practical."

Gardner estimated the $2 bill would save $4 million annually in printing costs since fewer total bills would be needed. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing prints the U.S. currency.

Scott City school board approves budget

SCOTT CITY — A budget of $1,314,798 for the 1975-76 school year was approved Monday night by the Illmo-Scott City R-1 Board of Education.

Board members learned that there may be a 3 per cent cut in state school monies by Gov. Christopher S. Bond as part of an overall state reduction. Should this occur, state monies to the school district would be reduced by $15,000 to $20,000.

Jesse Holmes, superintendent of schools, said 26 per cent of state money was paid the district in September; 16 per cent is due in December and 18 per cent will be received in March. The largest percentage — 40 per cent — will not be paid until May 28, one day after classes are dismissed for the summer, he said.

New classrooms to provide extra space are now in use, the board was told, and all work with the exception of a few minor details has been completed.

Two new school buses, a 1975 66-passenger and a 1975 54-passenger, are in use.

Bill Heckert, high school principal, gave a progress report on the school's self-evaluatin procedures for admission into the North Central Association. A 20 to 25-member North Central evaluation team will visit the school in February.

Doug Berry, elementary principal, reported on the screening process for detecting learning disabilities, and on a testing program for pupils in kindergarten and first grade.

Plastic bottle use for aspirin and aspirin-related products was nearly 200 million units in 1973, according to the Plastic Bottle Institute. Estimates are that this will reach 400 million by 1978.

Two arrests made in school break-in

DEXTER — Two arrests were made Tuesday afternoon in connection with a Sunday night break-in at the junior high school, police said today.

Billy Bishop, 17, and a younger boy were arrested about 3 p.m. Tuesday, and Bishop was charged with burglary and stealing. The other boy, whose identity is protected by juvenile laws, was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Bishop was placed in the city jail but was to be transferred to the Stoddard County jail at Bloomfield sometime today, police said.

A third suspect in the burglary is still being sought.

Police received the break-in report Monday morning when school officials noticed windows broken on the north side of the building. Nothing was reported missing, however, until Tuesday morning when it was discovered a cassette tape recorder, used in special education classes, a transistor radio, hydraulic winch and $15 in change from a soft-drink machine were missing.

Police said today that the recorder and winch had been recovered.

East Prairie council approves of consolidation of drainage district

EAST PRAIRIE--The City Council Tuesday night approved paving of West Pine Street and instructed City Attorney Fielding Potashnick of Sikeston to draw up a resolution whereby the city will go on record in favor of a consolidated Circuit Court Drainage District for the floodway area.

Paving of West Pine Street will be done by a city crew at a cost of $5.50 per front foot by property owners along either side of the street. The city will pay the remaining $2.83 per foot from revenue obtained from the city's one-cent sales tax.

A petition from property owners opposing the paving was presented to the council but did not have the required majority of votes against the measure to petition the program out.

Potashnick was instructed to write a resolution stating the city's approval of the formation of the consolidated drainage district in the floodway area between the setback levee and the river levee. Some 55 landowners in the area filed objections to the proposal last week in Circuit Court.

The council agreed to let the Retired Senior Volunteer Program use the teen town building as the new location for its thrift shop. The building on Washington Drive, presently housing the shop, has been sold.

Rabbit schedules series of receptions in state

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri House Speaker Richard Rabbitt scheduled a series of receptions around the state today as part of his plans to file for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

Rabbitt, from St. Louis, announced plans to file Sept. 30 for the second time. He had initially said he planned to pay his filing fee in August.

Only one other person, St. Louis Democrat John McAllister, has filed for the post now held by Republican William Phelps, who has indicated he will probably seek a second term.

In response to Rabbitt's announced plans, Phelps issued a prepared statement today, saying that if he is re-elected he planned to "continue to be full time Phelps.

"By not practicing law as past lieutenant governors did, I have been able to help many people as a fulltime public servant," Phelps said.

Rabbitt is in the middle of his second term as speaker. He has served in the House since 1961.

An ordinance was passed to require all city employes who work outdoors to wear safety shoes. The employes must buy the shoes by Jan. 1, 1976.

Thornton said that in the past year several incidents have occurred in which city employes have stepped on rusty nails. The safety shoes have a steel shank and toe.

Insurance bids were opened for buildings and contents owned by the city, but the matter was referred to the insurance committee for study and recommendations.

A proposed ordinance limiting the number of yard sales to one per family each year was tabled until the next meeting.

Also tabled was a request by Tom McGill, 311 E. Alley St., for the city to pay half the $500 cost of a lawn mower he had bought. He says he has mowed city property for the last 15 or 20 years, which adjoins his property.

No objections were voiced at a public hearing, held in conjunction with the council meeting, to the replatting of block six in the East Gate addition. The council adopted an ordinance abandoning an alley running east and west on property owned by Dewey Heppe. With the replatting, the alley will run north and south.

City Manager Willis Downs was authorized to seek bids on two intermediate sized 1975 police cars. A 1973 and a 1974 model will be used as trade-ins, and the council requested that automobile agencies out of town be contacted in order that more competitive bids might be received.

Downs informed the council he had received a request from owners of the Storming Bull restaurant for reimbursement of $300 paid for a liquor license for operation on Sunday. Downs said the restaurant had been turned down for a state license for Sunday sales. The council approved the reimbursement.

In other action, the council approved a trailer permit for Bob Grogan at 210 N. Heggie St. and was informed that the city had received a $26,343 revenue-sharing check. Also, Mayor William Knight signed a proclamation designating Oct. 21 as United Fund Day.

$2 bill staging comeback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $2 bill, which disappeared almost a decade ago because of public disinterest, is staging a comeback in time for the Bicentennial, a congressman says.

Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., said today that he has learned that the Treasury Department plans to issue 400 million $2 bills annually. At the same time, the department will cut in half the current production of 1.8 billion $1 bills, Rosenthal said, citing a letter from Deputy Treasury Secretary Stephen S. Gardner.

Although the letter to Rosenthal indicated a final decision on reissuing the bill had been made, a Treasury spokesman said the decision was not yet final. The Treasury scheduled a public hearing later today to get views of consumers on whether they thought the bill would be well-received by Americans.

The old $2 series was discontinued in 1966; the new bill would be issued in connection with the nation's Bicentennial observance.

Consumer disinterest in the $2 bill in the past was the chief reason it was taken out of circulation in 1966.

But Gardner said in an Oct. 10 letter to Rosenthal that studies, including a Harvard Business School survey, indicate that reissuance of the bill is "both feasible and practical."

Gardner estimated the $2 bill would save $4 million annually in printing costs since fewer total bills would be needed. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing prints the U.S. currency.

Scott City school board approves budget

SCOTT CITY — A budget of $1,314,798 for the 1975-76 school year was approved Monday night by the Illmo-Scott City R-1 Board of Education.

Board members learned that there may be a 3 per cent cut in state school monies by Gov. Christopher S. Bond as part of an overall state reduction. Should this occur, state monies to the school district would be reduced by $15,000 to $20,000.

Jesse Holmes, superintendent of schools, said 26 per cent of state money was paid the district in September; 16 per cent is due in December and 18 per cent will be received in March. The largest percentage — 40 per cent — will not be paid until May 28, one day after classes are dismissed for the summer, he said.

New classrooms to provide extra space are now in use, the board was told, and all work with the exception of a few minor details has been completed.

Two new school buses, a 1975 66-passenger and a 1975 54-passenger, are in use.

Bill Heckert, high school principal, gave a progress report on the school's self-evaluatin procedures for admission into the North Central Association. A 20 to 25-member North Central evaluation team will visit the school in February.

Doug Berry, elementary principal, reported on the screening process for detecting learning disabilities, and on a testing program for pupils in kindergarten and first grade.

Plastic bottle use for aspirin and aspirin-related products was nearly 200 million units in 1973, according to the Plastic Bottle Institute. Estimates are that this will reach 400 million by 1978.

Reds outslug Sox; go one up

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Big Red Machine is in the driver's seat of the World Series, thanks to some sudden power and a spark from a home plate collision.

The Cincinnati Reds unlimbered their big guns and turned a controversial play at home to their advantage for a 6-5, 10-inning victory Tuesday night and a 2-1 lead in baseball's Fall Classic.

In tonight's fourth game, the Reds send left-hander Fred Norman against Boston right-handed ace Luis Tiant at 8:30 p.m. EDT.

"We won tonight because we're lucky ... because the good Lord takes care of us," said Manager Sparky Anderson.

Anderson could think of no other way to describe the Reds' bittersweet victory in Game 3 — a pulsating, tense affair that had everything, including the most talked-bout play of the 1975 World Series so far.

This was the situation: with the game tied at 5-5 and a runner at first in the 10th inning, Anderson ordered pinch hitter Ed Armbrister to lay down a sacrifice bunt. Armbrister did as expected, but something unexpected followed.

The ball hopped a few feet in front of home plate and Boston catcher Carlton Fisk charged to field it. He had difficulty getting to it, however, because Armbrister was in his way.

When Fisk picked up the ball, he threw toward second base in an attempt to get the lead runner. But the throw was wild into center field and the Reds suddenly had runners on second and third base because of the error.

The play triggered a protest from the Boston bench, particularly Fisk and Manager Darrell Johnson. They felt the batter had interfered with Fisk's play and therefore should have been called out by home plate umpire Larry Barnett.

The play became all the more crucial, because the Reds loaded the bases and went on to win the contest on Joe Morgan's single.

A seething Fisk had nothing pleasant to say about Barnett after the bitter defeat at Riverfront Stadium.

"He blew it two ways," the Boston catcher said of Barnett. "The first time was when he didn't call interference on the play. The second time was when he didn't call the man out because I probably tagged him after I got the ball."

Johnson was equally incensed.

"I don't need to read the rule out of the rule book," he said. "We all know the rule and Armbrister did interfere with Fisk. The man is entitled to run to first base, but the runner can not come into contact with the fielder before he has the opportunity to field it.

"I went up to the plate umpire and when I didn't get any satisfaction, I went to the first base umpire. I didn't get any satisfaction from him, either. He just shrugged and didn't say anything. Their interpretation of the rule is obviously different from mine."

Barnett, of course, had his own interpretation of the rules, as did the Cincinnati camp.

"I ruled that it was simply a collision," Barnett said. "It is interference only when the batter intentionally gets in the way of the fielder. I signalled that the ball was fair and in play."

Dick Stello, the first base umpire who backed up Barnett during the heated Boston protests on the field, said: "It was not interference. In such a situation, the batter has as much right to go to first base as the fielder has to go for the ball. To make it interference, the batter would have had to intentionally try to impede the fielder from going for the ball. He did not do this."

As was expected, Armbrister swore up and down that he did nothing intentional to block Fisk's way.

"I hit the ball in front of the plate and it bounced high," said the player in the middle of the dramatic controversy. "I started to break for first and Fisk just came from behind and bumped me. The play was behind me, and if he hit from behind. I would say he interfered with me."

If it wasn't for what Sparky Anderson called his "stupid" mistake, the whole business wouldn't have happened.

The Reds had a 5-3 lead going into the ninth inning with reliever Will McEnaney seemingly in control of things. The Reds' left-handed bullpen ace struck out Fred Lynn for the first out and the crowd of 55,392 at Riverfront settled back for what looked like a comfortable Cincinnati victory.

Then McEnaney gave up a single to Rico Petrocelli and Anderson brought in Rawly Eastwick to face Dwight Evans. He didn't face him too long, for the Boston outfielder promptly parked one of his pitches into the left field seats to tie the game and send it toward its unpredictable climax.

"I made a dumb mistake, it's as simple as that," Anderson said. "I should have had Eastwick in there a batter earlier pitching to Petrocelli. I waited one batter too long to bring in a right-hander against Petrocelli."

Cesar Geronimo got things started in the 10th with a single and moved to third on the controversial bunt play. The Red Sox issued an intentional walk to Pete Rose to load the bases. Pinch hitter Merv Rettenmund struck out before Morgan came through.

Earlier, Johnny Bench hit a two-run homer for the Reds in the fourth. And Dave Concepcion and Geronimo blasted homers in the fifth, when Cincinnati scored three times. Before Evans' game-tying wallop, the Red Sox got solo homers from Fisk in the second and Bernie Carbo in the seventh. The total of six shots tied a World Series record for most homers by two teams in a game.

Stoddard Co. volleyball finals set for tonight

RICHLAND — Lopsided scores continued to prevail in the A division of the Stoddard County Volleyball Tournament, while the B division featured more interesting contests.

When opening round play was completed Tuesday evening, an interesting pattern had developed. All four varsity games so far in the tournament had gone only two games, while all four B team contests had taken three games to decide a winner.

Advance and Richland were victorious in A division contests last night. Advance had little trouble with Bernie, winning 15-2 and 15-4. Richland easily disposed of Bell City, claiming 15-3 and 15-2 victories.

Bloomfield and Bernie moved into the semifinal round of the B division, but both teams had to come from behind to do so. Bloomfield dropped the first game of their match to Richland 15-6, but then came back to win the final two games 15-3 and 15-12. Bernie also started out on the wrong foot against Dexter, losing the opener 15-5. But the Mules rebounded to win the second game 15-11 and then took the finale 15-12.

Semifinal round play gets underway tonight at 5:30 as Bloomfield and Woodland square off in a varsity division contest. Advance and Woodland meet in a B team game at 6:30, followed byanother A division matchup between Richland and Advance at 7:30. Bernie and Bloomfield will close out the evening's action at 8:30 with a B match.

The tournament's finals will be held Thursday evening. The B division championship game will start at 6:30 and will be followed by the varsity finals at 7:30.

MADRID (AP) — Ninth-seeded Adriano Panatta of Italy beat Bjorn Borg of Sweden and and sixth-seeded Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia defeated No. 7 Jaime Fillol of Chile on Saturday to move into the final of the $75,000 Madrid Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Panatta needed only 58 minutes in whipping the 20-year-old Borg 7-5, 6-0, 6-2. However, Kodes had his work cut out for him against Fillol, who held on for 2¼ hours before succumbing 5-7, 2-6, 7-6, 6-2, 6-3.

The matches were played at Madrid's Club de Campo before a crowd of 5,000. The final will be played Sunday.

Stoddard Co. volleyball finals set for tonight

RICHLAND — Lopsided scores continued to prevail in the A division of the Stoddard County Volleyball Tournament, while the B division featured more interesting contests.

When opening round play was completed Tuesday evening, an interesting pattern had developed. All four varsity games so far in the tournament had gone only two games, while all four B team contests had taken three games to decide a winner.

Advance and Richland were victorious in A division contests last night. Advance had little trouble with Bernie, winning 15-2 and 15-4. Richland easily disposed of Bell City, claiming 15-3 and 15-2 victories.

Bloomfield and Bernie moved into the semifinal round of the B division, but both teams had to come from behind to do so. Bloomfield dropped the first game of their match to Richland 15-6, but then came back to win the final two games 15-3 and 15-12. Bernie also started out on the wrong foot against Dexter, losing the opener 15-5. But the Mules rebounded to win the second game 15-11 and then took the finale 15-12.

Semifinal round play gets underway tonight at 5:30 as Bloomfield and Woodland square off in a varsity division contest. Advance and Woodland meet in a B team game at 6:30, followed byanother A division matchup between Richland and Advance at 7:30. Bernie and Bloomfield will close out the evening's action at 8:30 with a B match.

The tournament's finals will be held Thursday evening. The B division championship game will start at 6:30 and will be followed by the varsity finals at 7:30.

MADRID (AP) — Ninth-seeded Adriano Panatta of Italy beat Bjorn Borg of Sweden and and sixth-seeded Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia defeated No. 7 Jaime Fillol of Chile on Saturday to move into the final of the $75,000 Madrid Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Panatta needed only 58 minutes in whipping the 20-year-old Borg 7-5, 6-0, 6-2. However, Kodes had his work cut out for him against Fillol, who held on for 2¼ hours before succumbing 5-7, 2-6, 7-6, 6-2, 6-3.

The matches were played at Madrid's Club de Campo before a crowd of 5,000. The final will be played Sunday.

1975-76 could be big season for Dogs

By DALE FORBIS

With temperatures in the area being more indicative of baseball, tennis and other outside endeavors, men like Clayton "Buddy" Spears look forward to their times in the "sun" -- the basketball season. No matter what kind of lies Mother Nature is spreading, the wind id gonna get nippy in the next couple of months and Wednesday, October 15, the 6-foot-5 Spears will greet candidates for his team, the Sikeston Bulldogs, in the upcoming season. If everybody expected shows up, the Bulldogs should be tough.

In his first year at SHS, the youthful Spears blended quickness with outside shooting for a 15-13 record and the championship of the Class 4-A Regional Tournament at Cape. Now, four of those starters are gone and 47 points out of the Bulldogs 70-plus points per game have departed with them. But, things look very good for the Bulldogs in 75-76.

Last year's team was an outstanding offensive unit. With shooters like Hal Presley, Steve Burchfield, Vangalee West and Russ Wissman, Sikeston had the offense. Any problems they encountered against the district's toughest schedule can be traced wholy to the defense and, to a slighter degree, on the boards. Slender Hal Presley, the Bulldogs' leading scorer and rebounder, has graduated and will be tough to replace. Presley is playing his roundball in Mississippi at junior college and it will be up to a trio of last year's jayvee ballplayers to take his place. But, those jayvee graduates are most of the reason for coach Sprears' optimism.

Last year Sikeston could score points in bunches, but they were hard-pressed to stop the opponents. Teams like Charleston and Kennett did exactly the same offensive things that the Bulldogs, did them better, and played defense to boot. Spears hopes his team can do some of the same in the season ahead.

Six - foot- 6 Paul Gilbow is a standout football player, but the big junior could have an even greater future on the hardcourt. Gilbow can be awesome on the boards and is a good shooter. While he doesn't have the quickness and offensive moves of a Presley or West, Gilbow is bigger and stronger, a better rebounder and potentially the strongest inside scorer Sikeston has ever had.

Six-foot-4 Marc Eaves should complement Gilbow well on the front line. Eaves is a streaky player, and, when he is hot, there is no mid-range shooter better. Defenders don't seem to bother the senior, who shot nearly 54 per cent from the field last year and was just two rebounds away from Presley's team lead with better than ten a game.

"You wouldn't recognize Curtis Sales," is the word from the high school, when talking about the high-leaping junior, who had bad hand problems last year. Just six-feet tall, Sales will jump center for Sikeston and give the Bulldogs, hopefully the district's strongest front three. Sales leaping ability has to be seen to be believes.

Guard is where Sikeston was the strongest last year and guard is where graduation hit the hardest. Diminutive Steve Burchfield came from nowhere to capture the hearts of Sikeston fans with his quick moves and deadly outcourt shooting. The 5-foot-7 guard hit nearly half his shots from postage-stamp range and averaged over ten points a game, while being nominated for All-American. His defense may have been sporadic, but Burch's shooting will be missed.

Vangalee West was Sikeston's best player down the stretch and is attending college in Arkansas. Russ Wissman also is gone and the Bulldogs must replace a good-shooting, strong defensive player because of it. This is the biggest question mark for Sikeston, but it is also where the Bulldogs return the most experience and the most answers.

Part-time starter Ron Priday is a good passer who must improve his shooting to s tart for Spears. The best hustler on a hustling team, Priday is the winning type of ballplayer that coaches like to have and, if he can shoot better than last year's 34 per cent, the guard position will be solid.

Harold Dockins is a better offensive ballplayer than Priday, a very capable defensive ballplayer and another possible answer in the backcourt. If Dockins can discipline his play and gain the maturity that many athletes do in their senior year, he would be a real asset.

Ed Nunnelee played many times last year when Sikeston needed the ball. His quickness is deceptive because of his willowy frame, but Nunnelee is aggressive and gives spears good depth at a critical position.

Larry Jackson appears to have the best shot at getting playing time, among those guard graduating the jayvee squad. Mike Warfield also should earn a uniform and Alonzo Harris, a 6-foot-3 junior, should provide inside help after a sickness - marred sophomore year.

Part time players Glen Alexander, Jeff Minner and Mike Ziegenhorn could be key players, too. These three saw sparing action last year and, if they are good enough to retain their uniforms considering all the competition, They could give the optimistic Spears much more to smile about.

Last year in basketball, just like this year in football, was a turn around season. The 15-13 record is deceiving because of a 1-9 January, when the bulldogs faced nine teams that ended the year with 20 wins. If this year's seniors will take hold like last and give Spears some on-court leadership, twenty wins is within reach.

The sweat starts rolling Wednesday afternoon at the fieldhouse and the fruits of the boys' labor goes on exhibit in early December, when the Bulldog season opens. If this team comes through half as good as the gridiron boys, the 1975-76 school athletic year could be Sikeston's best in ages.

An unidentified Richland player goes up in an attempt to block a spike from a Bloomfield athlete during the Stoddard County Volleyball Tournament action Tuesday night at Richland High School. The tournament continues tonight with semifinal round play and concludes with the finals Thursday evening.

Cards want Kessinger

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals are bidding for the services of Chicago Cubs shortstop Don Kessinger but are currently stalled in such a trade attempt, the Globe-Democrat said in its editions today.

"We've made our pitch for him, but we won't go overboard," Cards general manager Bing Devine was quoted by the newspaper as telling baseball writer Jack Herman in Cincinnati.

"They (Cubs) are trying to make the best deal possible, but we won't get into a bidding contest for him," Herman's story quotes Devine as saying.

The Globe-Democrat story also quotes new Chicago general manager Salty Saltwell as saying the Cubs are interested in a Cardinal pitcher, possibly left-hander John Curtis.

If the Cardinals should obtain the 33-year-old Kessinger, Herman's story says, the likelihood is that second baseman Ted Sizemore would be traded to an American League club and shortstop Mike Tyson moved to Sizemore's position.

Curtis posted an 8-9 record in 1975 for St. Louis. Kessinger, whose lifetime batting average is .256, hit .243 this past season for the Cubs.

Cards want Kessinger

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals are bidding for the services of Chicago Cubs shortstop Don Kessinger but are currently stalled in such a trade attempt, the Globe-Democrat said in its editions today.

"We've made our pitch for him, but we won't go overboard," Cards general manager Bing Devine was quoted by the newspaper as telling baseball writer Jack Herman in Cincinnati.

"They (Cubs) are trying to make the best deal possible, but we won't get into a bidding contest for him," Herman's story quotes Devine as saying.

The Globe-Democrat story also quotes new Chicago general manager Salty Saltwell as saying the Cubs are interested in a Cardinal pitcher, possibly left-hander John Curtis.

If the Cardinals should obtain the 33-year-old Kessinger, Herman's story says, the likelihood is that second baseman Ted Sizemore would be traded to an American League club and shortstop Mike Tyson moved to Sizemore's position.

Curtis posted an 8-9 record in 1975 for St. Louis. Kessinger, whose lifetime batting average is .256, hit .243 this past season for the Cubs.

Prison survey studies inmates return rate

JEFFERSON CITY — State Corrections officials are unwilling to draw conclusions from a survey on the return rate of inmates to Missouri's prisons despite the positive results of the study.

A random sample of 300 inmates released over the past three years showed that 79 per cent of those released in 1972 had not returned. The success rate for 1973 was 87 per cent and for 1974 was 98 per cent. The figures are higher for the more recent years because the inmates have been out for a shorter time.

"All we can conclude now is that the prison experience has not been any more destructive than it has in the past," said corrections director George Camp.

Camp said the reason he could not be more enthusiastic about the results was the complex nature of recidivism, the return rate of inmates.

"It is very difficult to put one's fingers on what the reasons are for recidivism. There are a lot of reasons about why men return to prison, and what happens at the prison is only part of it," Camp said.

Mark Steward of the Division of Corrections, says the survey is the beginning of a systematic approach to the study of recidivism. By breaking down the figures on a program basis he hopes to be able to judge the effectiveness of each program.

Figures released by the Diagnostic Center at the Missouri State Penitentiary show that recidivism is a significant problem in the state prison system.

Last year, 2,127 inmates were processed through the center and sent to various institutions. Of those, 34 per cent had served time in another prison.

While corrections officials agree that return offenders are a problem, there are many theories on what causes recidivism.

Warden Donald Wyrick of the Missouri State Penitentiary, represents a growing viewpoint when he blames "softer" prisons for the recidivism rate.

"Many inmates don't want to go outside the walls. They feel safe and secure in here. They have as good clothes as the next man and three meals a day. You make the penitentiary tougher than hell and these people wouldn't want to come back."

Camp says the personality of each inmate has a great deal to do with whether he returns or not.

"One factor is whether he has his head screwed on right when he gets out on the street — whether he can get along with his fellow workers and other people. It depends how well he gets back into the mainstream of American life."

Someone with a unique perspective on recidivism is John K., an inmate at the penitentiary. His distinguished looking gray hair and articulate manner give no indication that he has served nine different prison sentences.

He calls repeat offenses "doing a life sentence on the installment plan."

He says the fact that an inmate often has no job and little money when released has a lot to do with the return rate.

"They go out with the $50 the state gives them and a suit of clothes. All they have on their minds is to go out get drunk and find a girlfriend.

"They wake up the next morning with harsh reality facing them — $2 in their pocket, no job and no place to sleep the next night," he said.

Fords decide to give away and sell puppies

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Ford have decided to give away five of their dog's nine puppies, and will sell three others for $300 apiece.

The First Lady is keeping the ninth pup, a "somewhat blonde" female she picked out and named "Misty's Amber," after its sire, Misty's Sungood Ladd, a 10-year-old golden retriever champion owned by Jay and Valerie Walker of Medford, Ore.

All the pups will be kept for another three or four weeks until they are weaned.

Public may gain voice on boards

JEFFERSON CITY — The public may get a voice on how doctors, embalmers and other professionals in the state are licensed and disciplined if the legislature approves a plan to place a layman on each of the state's 15 professional licensing boards.

The proposal, being drafted by the Department of Consumer Affairs, Regulation and Licensing, is designed to quell criticism that state boards, comprised of professionals from each field, cannot regulate properly their own colleagues.

A similar plan, contained in a package of 15 bills, died in committee during the last legislative session because of a lack of time.

But state officials are optimistic about passage this spring, since the proposal will be submitted next session as an omnibus bill.

George Uffmann, director of the division of professional licensing, says the "bill would be beneficial to the boards, since it would provide more public exposure. Uffmann says the lay member would be more likely to speak out on board issues.

"It lends more credibility to the board to have an outside person on it," Uffmann says. "Initially I was not enthused by the idea, but after talking to directors in other states that have public members, I came to support the idea."

According to a 35-state survey conductet by the consumer affairs department, all but seven states had public members on some of their licensing boards.

Dave Doelling, consumer program assistant for the department, says studies have shown that the boards take over the licensed professions, and sometimes use their power to limit competition within the field.

Doelling says there is a "natural, inherent bias by the professional" when regulating the field.

"We want to preclude that problem from affecting us," he says, "and a public member is a step in the right direction. By and large, the professional can do a good job, but they just need to get the consumer viewpoint."

While he does not know of any restrictive policies of the Missouri licensing boards, Doelling says part of the impetus for the legislation came from "persons who felt they were abused by the agency."

Uffmann also says he has not found any abuses in the regulatory policies of the boards or excessively restrictive licensing practices.

There have been a few lawsuits over the years, challenging the boards' denial of licenses to applicants. In one case, an individual sued to have work in the state auditor's office counted as part of the required practical experience for the board's approval.

The state Supreme Court ruled that since the auditor was a certified public account, work in that office met the requirements.

Uffmann says, "One of our most important functions is to be very explicit when we turn someone down. Board members explain in detail what is needed to qualify."

Abuses found in other states do not give a true representation of the workings of Missouri licensing boards, he added. Uffmann says the inclusion of a layman on each of the public boards would help eliminate the chances of problems occurring in the future.

During hearings on the proposal last session, criticism came from two directions.

Some professional associations argued that there was no need for placing a public member on the boards. They were especially opposed to the idea of replacing one professional member of the board with the layman.

Doelling says that criticism has been met by having the layman as an additional member instead of as a replacement.

Other criticism about the plan came from those who believe that one layman on a board cannot accomplish anything.

The votes on some boards, Doelling says, will be 6 to 1 or 7 to 1. But at least the dissenting vote might call attention to an area of controversy.

Prison survey studies inmates return rate

JEFFERSON CITY — State Corrections officials are unwilling to draw conclusions from a survey on the return rate of inmates to Missouri's prisons despite the positive results of the study.

A random sample of 300 inmates released over the past three years showed that 79 per cent of those released in 1972 had not returned. The success rate for 1973 was 87 per cent and for 1974 was 98 per cent. The figures are higher for the more recent years because the inmates have been out for a shorter time.

"All we can conclude now is that the prison experience has not been any more destructive than it has in the past," said corrections director George Camp.

Camp said the reason he could not be more enthusiastic about the results was the complex nature of recidivism, the return rate of inmates.

"It is very difficult to put one's fingers on what the reasons are for recidivism. There are a lot of reasons about why men return to prison, and what happens at the prison is only part of it," Camp said.

Mark Steward of the Division of Corrections, says the survey is the beginning of a systematic approach to the study of recidivism. By breaking down the figures on a program basis he hopes to be able to judge the effectiveness of each program.

Figures released by the Diagnostic Center at the Missouri State Penitentiary show that recidivism is a significant problem in the state prison system.

Last year, 2,127 inmates were processed through the center and sent to various institutions. Of those, 34 per cent had served time in another prison.

While corrections officials agree that return offenders are a problem, there are many theories on what causes recidivism.

Warden Donald Wyrick of the Missouri State Penitentiary, represents a growing viewpoint when he blames "softer" prisons for the recidivism rate.

"Many inmates don't want to go outside the walls. They feel safe and secure in here. They have as good clothes as the next man and three meals a day. You make the penitentiary tougher than hell and these people wouldn't want to come back."

Camp says the personality of each inmate has a great deal to do with whether he returns or not.

"One factor is whether he has his head screwed on right when he gets out on the street — whether he can get along with his fellow workers and other people. It depends how well he gets back into the mainstream of American life."

Someone with a unique perspective on recidivism is John K., an inmate at the penitentiary. His distinguished looking gray hair and articulate manner give no indication that he has served nine different prison sentences.

He calls repeat offenses "doing a life sentence on the installment plan."

He says the fact that an inmate often has no job and little money when released has a lot to do with the return rate.

"They go out with the $50 the state gives them and a suit of clothes. All they have on their minds is to go out get drunk and find a girlfriend.

"They wake up the next morning with harsh reality facing them — $2 in their pocket, no job and no place to sleep the next night," he said.

Fords decide to give away and sell puppies

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Ford have decided to give away five of their dog's nine puppies, and will sell three others for $300 apiece.

The First Lady is keeping the ninth pup, a "somewhat blonde" female she picked out and named "Misty's Amber," after its sire, Misty's Sungood Ladd, a 10-year-old golden retriever champion owned by Jay and Valerie Walker of Medford, Ore.

All the pups will be kept for another three or four weeks until they are weaned.

A park on the move

By GARY EVERHARDT

National Park Service

Pinnacles National Monument, which straddles California's famed San Andreas earthquake fault, is literally a "park on the move."

For millions of years, the craggy pinnacles, riding the tectonic Pacific Plate, have been inching northward and now are nearly 200 miles north of their original location.

Moving with glacial rapidity — an inch and a half a year — Pinnacles is expected to pull abreast of San Francisco in about four million years.

This 22-square-mile jumble of volcanic spires and coastal chaparral today is located 24 miles south of Hollister, Calif., between U.S. 101 and State Route 25, east of Soledad.

Wind, rain, heat, frost and the earth's upheavals have shaped cave-like canyons, rocky tunnels and other grotesque geological formations that offer varied hiking and climbing experiences.

Pinnacles is a park best explored on foot.

If you are a casual stroller, take the self-guiding Moses Spring Trail, which leads you over the Bear Gulch Caves, past oozing springs and leafy fern grottoes to the top of the dam, a distance of 0.7 miles. If you plan to go all the way through the caves on the return trip, be sure to bring a flashlight.

For the more energetic hiker, Pinnacles offers another 26 miles of trails, the most strenuous of which is the nine-mile Chalone Peak Trail which rises to 2,150 feet, winding through dense stands of chaparral and offering panoramic views of the surrounding countryside and the pinnacles from the fire tower.

Experienced rock climbers will appreciate Pinnacles' boulders of varied shapes, sizes and difficulties.

Choose the hike that is right for you by studying the detailed relief map at the visitor center near the east entrance, or discuss your plans with the ranger on duty.

The geology of Pinnacles is not its only unique feature. The monument contains the only complete example of coast chaparral in the National Park System. The brush and shrubs that hug the rugged slopes are adept at living without water for long periods.

Summer and autumn are hot and dry, while winter and spring bathe the park with an average 16 inches of rain per year.

To last through this annual drought, the area's flora are small. Manzanita, chamise and buckbrush are shaped like miniature trees and some chaparral communities resemble pygmy forest.

This dwarf vegetation provides habitat and shelter for many animals. Black-tailed deer and raccoons can be seen near trails and occasionally wander through campgrounds. Gray fox and bobcat are common, but are seen only at night. As you watch for trailside movements you may spot a large lizard sitting by the path, confident that he blends perfectly with the dusty soil.

Rattlesnakes are active from early spring through late fall and you may encounter one on the trail.

They are not aggressive, but give them a wide berth and do not molest.

Students score well in testing

JEFFERSON CITY— Missouri youngsters are scoring well in both mathematics and reading, according to the first results from the statewide testing program for public school students.

These first scores, just compiled, were from approximately 28,000 fourth grade students from across the state.

"The performance of these fourth graders really was quite high," said Charles Foster, director of guidance services for the State Department of Elementary and Secondary Education. "Better still, we're hopeful and have every reason to expect that because of the tests, future fourth graders will do even better."

Primary purpose of the testing program is to assist teachers in making their programs and teaching methods more effective.

Consequently, in these first (criterion-based) tests, results cannot be compared to national or existing state averages, as they would be in tests (norm-referenced) in which a student's level of performance is checked against an established average.

Approximately 50,000 Missouri seventh graders will take tests in reading and mathematics this fall, which will be both criterion and norm-referenced and which can be compared to national averages.

Even so, the little fourth graders were examined rather closely for "mastery" of a reading or mathematical objective.

Each was tested on 30 mathematics and 30 reading objectives, with each objective having three questions. This results in 90 questions for each subject. Under this system, if a student misses one question under an objective, he is not considered a "master" of that objective.

Test scores reveal that 52 per cent of the students had mastered the mathematical objectives and 41 per cent the reading objectives.

"This is not as bad as it may seem at first," Foster said. "An examination of the answers showed that 50 per cent of the students answered at least 76 of the 90 mathematical questions and 74 of the 90 reading questions. The fourth graders performed quite well, especially in these two subject areas. The state of Missouri can take justifiable pride in the performance of these students."

The math results were surprising to some of the educators associated with the testing project. Traditionally, Missouri youngsters have scored higher in reading than mathematics. Yet, in these tests, they had higher math scores in both objectives mastered and total questions answered correctly.

Foster emphasized that the test data cannot be used to evaluate teachers. In this regard, however, the test information should help them become more effective.

"With the results," he said, "teachers can determine quickly the learning objectives which have been mastered. Rather than reteaching those learnings, they can zero in on objectives not mastered. This is true for an entire class or an individual child."

According to the tests, some specific areas in which fourth graders need more work are:

More emphasis on teaching for comprehension, particularly in reading; better study skills, at home and at school; more basic understanding about how to use a library; more emphasis on geometric concepts; and more emphasis on measurements, such as computing money involved in a sale.

In addition to theory and concepts, the seventh graders to be tested this fall also will be asked some "real world" questions. Some of these practical questions could involve purchasing, discounts, the ability to follow instructions similar to those found in a technical manual and a comprehension of job descriptions and employment qualifications.

"In a number of ways, this testing program is basic to our concern for accountability in the public schools," said Commissioner of Education Arthur L. Mallory.

"As we expand the program, it will provide us with information about how well we are doing in several subject matter areas."

More importantly, Mallory said, the testing program will be of enormous benefit to the state's children and young people. Collectively, their needs, as well as their strong points, will become known, thereby permitting schools to provide instruction in the critical areas.

"In this sense," he continued, "the Statewide Testing Program may be one of the more valuable educational projects undertaken in Missouri in many years."

Conservationists urge water pollution cleanup

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The American people want to secure their right to swimmable and fishable water and are willing to pay the price needed to do the job.

That was the message conveyed to the National Commission on Water Quality and its chairman, Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, by representatives of 13 environmental organizations in an Oct. 1 meeting in Washington.

"The American people recognize the importance of cleaning our polluted waters now and avoiding costly delays," said Thomas L. Kimball, executive vice president of the National Wildlife Federation, the nation's largest conservation education organization.

To prove his point, the federation's leader cited a recent public opinion poll conducted by Opinion Research Corporation and distributed bythe Environmental Protection Agency.

According to the poll, 60 per cent of the American people are willing to pay higher prices to protect the environment, 86 per cent feel we are paying for pollution that we have caused and 90 per cent believe that a delay in pollution control will lead to higher cleanup costs in the long run.

Summarizing the principle conclusions of the conservation groups, Kimball told the vice president and commission staff that the commission should recommend full implementation of the 1977 and 1983 requirements of the 1972 Federal Water Pollution Control Act amendments in its final report to Congress.

"There is no doubt that greater environmental damage and higher cleanup costs will accrue if Congress decides to delay implementation of the 1977 and 1983 requirements," he said.

The 1972 law calls for industrial waste water dischargers to install the "best practicable" treatment technology by 1977 and the "best available" technology by 1983. It requires municipal sewage treatment plants to have secondary sewage treatment by 1977.

The commission was established by Congress to provide a mid-course review of the effectiveness of the 1972 law and efforts to implement it.

Kimball and the other environmental representatives urged Rockefeller and the commissiion to refrain from recommending changes in the act and keep the water quality goals "in place."

The vice president had asked Kimball to coordinate the meeting with the conservation representatives in order to get their comments on a staff draft of the commission'sreport.

While acknowledging that there have been administrative problems in carrying out the provisions of the 1972 law, Kimball said, "We all are pleased with the goals of the act and feel it is time to meet those objectives. The law has been in effect only a little over two years, and it should be given a chance to work."

He noted that any relaxation of water quality goals would serve to discourage industry from stepping up its efforts to control water pollution. He also emphasized that industrial spending on pollution control is not proceeding at the rate needed to do the job.

A discussion of economic impacts by David Zwick of the Clean Water Action Program revealed that the estimated quantifiable benefits of a cleanup program will equal 50 per cent of the costs by 1988. After 1988 the costs will begin to drop while the benefits will continue to accumulate and grow, Zwick asserted.

Club tours Reelfoot Lake

Evidential portion of PSC investigation of Sw Bell completed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The evidential portion of the Public Service Commission's investigation into political contributions made by Southwester Bell Telphone Co. ended Tuesday with a company attorney moving for the dismissal of the entire case.

"There is no evidence of the use of corporate funds for political purposes," said Jack C. Lorenz, the Bell lawyer, as he presented a notice to terminate the investigation to PSC Chairman A. Robert Pierce Jr., who ignored the request.

Tuesday marked the end of the evidence gathering portion of the investigation, and parties involved in the case are to submit their arguments based on the evidence by mid-December. Pierce said the commission could issue a ruling in the case by the end of January, nearly a year since the investigation of the large, St. Louis-based utility began.

Included in the reams of information presented to the commission, was a lengthy depostion taken from H.D. Ames, assistant vice president in charge of political relations for Bell.

The deposition, which took three days to collect, had delayed the commission's investigation of the telephone firm since Ames had been hospitalized and on medical disability leave from the company. Depositions were taken from 16 other Bell workers.

Lorenz objected to the placing of some of the exhibits into evidence, saying the information had come from persons now dead, was irrelevant and outside the scope of the PSC inquiry and that questions asked of the Bell employes were broad and generalized.

Defensive driving saves lives

jEFFERSON CITY — Many of the more than 700 persons who have died in Missouri traffic accidents so far this year might be alive today if the drivers involved had practiced defensive driving, according to Col. Sam S. Smith, superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

Col . Smith stated that defensive driving is the technique of recognizing either real or potential hazards and being prepared to avoid them. He said, "The defensive driver defends against the errors of other drivers, against adverse conditions of roadway, traffic or weather and keeps his vehicle in safe operating condition at all times."

Keep your eyes on the road and other traffic, and keep your mind on driving; watch for traffic behind you by frequent glances in the rear view mirror; slow down at night or anytime visibility is poor.

Adjust speed to conditions of weather, traffic and roadway; keep a safe distance from the vehicle ahead and always expect that the vehicle you are following will stop suddenly; watch ahead for possible accident situations in the making.

Be in a position to avoid them; make sure that your vehicle is in top mechanical condition and will not fail you in an emergency.

Sikeston man wins award

AUSTIN, Tex. — A University of Texas graduate student, Daniel L. Overbey, son of Mrs. Leonard Overbey of 534 Carroll Ave., Sikeston, Mo., and the late Leonard Overbey, has been selected as second -prize winner of the Transportation Research Forum's 1975 student paper contest.

The announcement of the selection was made by Dr. D. Daryl Wyckoff of the Harvard University Graduate School of Business, chairman of the selection committee.

Overbey's paper, "Trackage Rights: Advantages and Disadvantages" will receive the $200 second prize award. It will also be considered for publication in "TRF Proceedings", a book comprised of papers presented at this year's annual meeting, which will be held Nov. 3-5 in Toronto.

The Transportation Research Forum is an association of persons interested in transportation from the fields of business, government and education. Its purpose is to provide a common meeting ground for the discussion of ideas and research techniques applicable to transportation.

Overbey's paper deals with trackage rights, the legal device by which one railroad shares the use of its track with another railroad in return for rental payments. Excess trackage is a recognized problem in the railroad industry. By expanding the use of trackage rights, rail traffic could be concentrated on fewer lines on which competitive service could be maintained.

One of the better examples of this is the heavily used St. Louis-Texas lines of the Missouri Pacific Railroad and the Cotton Belt line. Between Dexter and East St. Louis, the two railroad firms share a common track. Although Cotton Belt owns the Dexter-Illmo segment and MoPac the Thebes-East St. Louis segment, both parts are operated as one joint line. This saves both capital investment and operating costs.

Overbey's paper suggests the possibility of competitive local service, which current trackage rights prohibit.

Overbey attended Sikeston public schools and earned his bachelor's degree in business management at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau. While at SeMo State, he received the Wall Street Journal award and the Alpha Kappa Psi Scholarship Key, given to the highest ranking student in the business school.

He is now attending the University of Texas Graduate School of Business.

Tattooing canines catching on

MOLINE, Ill. (AP) — Social Security numbers are going to the dogs.

An obedience club here has begun tattooing canines with their owner's number as a protection against loss, and the idea seems to be catching on elsewhere in the nation.

"It's much like the identification operations that police stations run," says Sandy King, vice president of the Quad Cities Dog Obedience Club in northwestern Illinois. "They are engraving the Social Security number on say a television set, but it's the same oncept. It can be legally proven that it's yours."

Mrs. King said the tattooing of Social Security numbers on dogs is increasing around the nation because of a surge in dognaping.

"Around the country dognaping is becoming more and more popular," she said. "There are rings of dog thieves that go around and steal and then they take the dogs off to a research laboratory somewhere.

"But laboratories will not accept tattooed dogs," she said. "So when your thieves find out the dog is tattoed, they immediately turn him loose because that could be identified as stolen property."

The club has been tattooing members' dogs for about a year and recently held a half-dozen of public tattooing clinics where area owners can get their dogs tattooed for $4.

PAYING THE TEA BILL

It's not one of the biggest issues in Washington and certainly there are programs that cost more. But there is something especially galling - - almost insulting - - about the notion of tax dollars going to support a federal tea tasting program.

Others have felt the same way, including former President Nixon, who singled out tea tasting in a 1970 speech as one of the worst examples of waste in government. Unfortunately, he did nothing about it. In fact, costs of the program actually rose in the years after his speech.

End Waste

Now, if something can't be done about a program as silly as tea tasting, then we're in greater trouble than we think. So, I set out in 1972 to end this waste with an appropriations amendment which prohibited expenditure of any funds for tea in excess of revenues raised through fees charged tea importers.

The year I offered that amendment (1973), net cost to the taxpayers for tea tasting was $115,800. Among other things, that money paid the expenses of a Board of Tea Experts, a Board of Tea Appeals, and the costs of preparing tea samples.

Bureaucracy Heeded the Warning

The year after my amendment went into effect, the federal government not only stopped putting tax dollars into this program, but actually made money - - a net of $1,206.

That may be one of the few times in history the federal government made money on one of its programs.

The dangerous implications of this precedent were not lost on the Washington bureaucracy, however. Thus, it was with some relief that the agency was able to report that after its brief fall from bureaucratic favor, tea tasting had once again emerged in the deficit column, costing the taxpayer a small but promising $5,482 in 1975.

What was it the man said about eternal vigilance?

Club tours Reelfoot Lake

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The evidential portion of the Public Service Commission's investigation into political contributions made by Southwester Bell Telphone Co. ended Tuesday with a company attorney moving for the dismissal of the entire case.

"There is no evidence of the use of corporate funds for political purposes," said Jack C. Lorenz, the Bell lawyer, as he presented a notice to terminate the investigation to PSC Chairman A. Robert Pierce Jr., who ignored the request.

Tuesday marked the end of the evidence gathering portion of the investigation, and parties involved in the case are to submit their arguments based on the evidence by mid-December. Pierce said the commission could issue a ruling in the case by the end of January, nearly a year since the investigation of the large, St. Louis-based utility began.

Included in the reams of information presented to the commission, was a lengthy deposition taken from H.D. Ames, assistant vice president in charge of political relations for Bell.

The deposition, which took three days to collect, had delayed the commission's investigation of the telephone firm since Ames had been hospitalized and on medical disability leave from the company. Depositions were taken from 16 other Bell workers.

Lorenz objected to the placing of some of the exhibits into evidence, saying the information had come from persons now dead, was irrelevant and outside the scope of the PSC inquiry and that questions asked of the Bell employes were broad and generalized.

Defensive driving saves lives

JEFFERSON CITY — Many of the more than 700 persons who have died in Missouri traffic accidents so far this year might be alive today if the drivers involved had practiced defensive driving, according to Col. Sam S. Smith, superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

Col . Smith stated that defensive driving is the technique of recognizing either real or potential hazards and being prepared to avoid them. He said, "The defensive driver defends against the errors of other drivers, against adverse conditions of roadway, traffic or weather and keeps his vehicle in safe operating condition at all times."

Keep your eyes on the road and other traffic, and keep your mind on driving; watch for traffic behind you by frequent glances in the rear view mirror; slow down at night or anytime visibility is poor.

Adjust speed to conditions of weather, traffic and roadway; keep a safe distance from the vehicle ahead and always expect that the vehicle you are following will stop suddenly; watch ahead for possible accident situations in the making.

Be in a position to avoid them; make sure that your vehicle is in top mechanical condition and will not fail you in an emergency.

Sikeston man wins award

AUSTIN, Tex. — A University of Texas graduate student, Daniel L. Overbey, son of Mrs. Leonard Overbey of 534 Carroll Ave., Sikeston, Mo., and the late Leonard Overbey, has been selected as second-prize winner of the Transportation Research Forum's 1975 student paper contest.

The announcement of the selection was made by Dr. D. Daryl Wyckoff of the Harvard University Graduate School of Business, chairman of the selection committee.

Overbey's paper, "Trackage Rights: Advantages and Disadvantages" will receive the $200 second prize award. It will also be considered for publication in "TRF Proceedings", a book comprised of papers presented at this year's annual meeting, which will be held Nov. 3-5 in Toronto.

The Transportation Research Forum is an association of persons interested in transportation from the fields of business, government and education. Its purpose is to provide a common meeting ground for the discussion of ideas and research techniques applicable to transportation.

Overbey's paper deals with trackage rights, the legal device by which one railroad shares the use of its track with another railroad in return for rental payments. Excess trackage is a recognized problem in the railroad industry. By expanding the use of trackage rights, rail traffic could be concentrated on fewer lines on which competitive service could be maintained.

One of the better examples of this is the heavily used St. Louis-Texas lines of the Missouri Pacific Railroad and the Cotton Belt line. Between Dexter and East St. Louis, the two railroad firms share a common track. Although Cotton Belt owns the Dexter-Illmo segment and MoPac the Thebes-East St. Louis segment, both parts are operated as one joint line. This saves both capital investment and operating costs.

Overbey's paper suggests the possibility of competitive local service, which current trackage rights prohibit.

Overbey attended Sikeston public schools and earned his bachelor's degree in business management at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau. While at SeMo State, he received the Wall Street Journal award and the Alpha Kappa Psi Scholarship Key, given to the highest ranking student in the business school.

He is now attending the University of Texas Graduate School of Business.

Tattooing canines catching on

MOLINE, Ill. (AP) — Social Security numbers are going to the dogs.

An obedience club here has begun tattooing canines with their owner's number as a protection against loss, and the idea seems to be catching on elsewhere in the nation.

"It's much like the identification operations that police stations run," says Sandy King, vice president of the Quad Cities Dog Obedience Club in northwestern Illinois. "They are engraving the Social Security number on say a television set, but it's the same oncept. It can be legally proven that it's yours."

Mrs. King said the tattooing of Social Security numbers on dogs is increasing around the nation because of a surge in dognaping.

"Around the country dognaping is becoming more and more popular," she said. "There are rings of dog thieves that go around and steal and then they take the dogs off to a research laboratory somewhere.

"But laboratories will not accept tattooed dogs," she said. "So when your thieves find out the dog is tattoed, they immediately turn him loose because that could be identified as stolen property."

The club has been tattooing members' dogs for about a year and recently held a half-dozen of public tattooing clinics where area owners can get their dogs tattooed for $4.

'Blue Bird' tales tagged fantastic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "People stare at me and are amazed that I am not a doddering wreck. I feel like Edmund Dantes, just escaped from prison in 'the Count of Monte Cristo.'"

That was George Cukor's wry observation on his return to Hollywood from the already-legendary filming of "The Blue Bird" in Leningrad. So many wild stories came out of the production that Cukor wonders if he was directing the same picture.

"The tales that I read and hear are fantastic," he said. "I was supposed to be directing the picture from a stretcher. Elizabeth Taylor was said to dislike the Russian food so much that she dined every night in Helsinki."

Far from being a stretcher case, George Cukor seems unscarred by the whole experience. At 76 he was doubtless the oldest member of the Russian- American- English movie venture. Yet he seems to have thrived despite the long, troubled production.

"I am certainly not a card-carrying Communist," commented Kukor, whose taste and leanings are decidedly capitalistic. "Nor do I think I am just trying to look on the bright side.

"But really, I found the Russians to be very sweet. They did everything they could to solve our problems, and they were puzzled by the reports that were printed in the Western press. They, of course, are not accustomed to a free press.

"As far as I could determine, there was no spying, no surveilance. I could even kid with the Russsians, asking them not to send me to Siberia if the picture went wrong. They replied, 'Siberia is lovely now.'"

Cukor said the main problem with "The Blue Bird" was that the original coproduction deal arranged by American producer Edward Lewis was underfinanced.

James Symington recalls campaigning for father in 1952

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Rep. James Symington, D-Mo., speaking like a candidate for his father's Senate seat but still unannounced, recalled campaigning for the senator with guitar and song in 1952.

That was the year that Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., now 74 and retiring, first ran for the Senate.

The younger Symington, who is expected to announce for the Democratic nomination to succeed his father, addressed 60 persons at a coffee here Monday night, capsuling his career in song.

"After I was done playing," he recalled the 1953 campaign, "my father would take the microphone and say, 'Thanks for listening to my boy.'"

"That," the congressman said, "was great."

Then he got down to cases.

The first question raised in western Missouri, he said, is usually, "When are we going to get a senator from the west side, the Kansas City side, of the state?"

"The answer I usually give is I'm sure you want a senator who is good from Kansas City and not necessarily from Kansas City," Symington said.

"A close relative of mine did much for Kansas City in 24 years in the Senate, and I hope I can follow in that tradition."

What's the law?

The case of the dainty police officer

By: JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Whenever Betty stepped on a scale, she never felt a sinking feeling. The envy of other women, she just didn't weight that much. When she filed an application to become a police officer, however, it seemed she just didn't weigh enough.

A regulation required officers to be at least 5 foot 8 and they had to weigh a minimum of 150 pounds. Missing the boat on both counts, Betty challenged the validity of the regulation in court claiming that it discriminated against women

"Women just don't grow that tall," she told a judge, "and they don't weigh that much. Consequently, neither requirement should be allowed to be a bar to their becoming police officers. After all," she added, "brains are as important as brawn. And, while one man may be as good as another, a woman is often better."

"In selecting police officers," responded a police official, "height and weight requirements are essential. What criminal is going to be psycholigically afraid of a pint-sized flyweight cop with a falsetto voice? When cornered, he's not going to try to run – he'll be too busy laughing."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you invalidate the regulation as being discriminatory against women.

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge ruled that while there was rational support for a height requirement -- a police officer ought to be a certain minimum height to maintain a psychological advantage against a police assaulter – there was none for the weight requirement. A police officer's clothing would make it difficult for the assaulter to determine the officer's weight, noted the judge, so that no psychological advantage is gained or lost. (Based upon a 1975 United states Court of Appeals Decision)

Dr. Lamb

Hardened arteries and brain disease

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 61-year-old female weighing about 136 pounds and am 5-feet-6 inches tall. I do not smoke or drink. A few months ago I had a complete physical examination including blood work, cardiogram and chest X ray.

My physician gave me a clean bill of health but said the X rays showed a tendency toward hardening of the arteries. I asked him what I could do about that he replied, "nothing."

This report has caused me quite a bit of concern because I have seen the mental confusion in older people caused by hardening of the arteries. Naturally I do not want this to happen to me. Could you give me any encouragement for my future health?

DEAR READER — Encouragement coming up. In the first place the kind of changes you can see on routine X rays in the arteries is not the kind that causes heart and brain disease. That ought to make you feel better. I am sure your doctor saw the kind we worry less about.

The kind of change we see in the arteries that causes heart attacks and strokes is the deposition of fatty-cholesterol particles just under the inside lining of the artery. The deposits bulge into the opening and shut it off partially or completely, or rupture, leading to the local formation of a clot in the artery. This causes a stroke (big or small) and heart attacks, depending on what artery is involved.

Another change we often see is the formation of calcium in the middle part of the arterial wall. This will make the artery hard, like a lead pipe, but it won't cause it to become obstructed. The calcium is radio-opaque, and it can be seen on the X ray. These deposits are commonly present in the wall of the main big artery, the aorta, that supplies all the body except the lungs.

To see the changes that obstruct arteries, you need to inject a radio-opaque dye into the artery and then take special pictures. This is what is done to see the changes in the coronary arteries or to visualize the arteries to the brain. That is not the kind of test you have on a routine medical examination, so that is not what your doctor is talking about.

Senility changes can and do occur even when there is no impairment of circulation to the brain. Nevertheless, if you can maintain normal circulation you have a better chance of avoiding the changes you want to escape.

To do this you should try to avoid or eliminate any tendency to obesity, use the kind of diet we recommend to prevent atherosclerosis, the formation of fatty-cholesterol deposits, and maintain a regular exercise program. If you want more information on the status of staying youthful longer write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Send 50 cents, a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, and ask for The Health Letter number 1-7, Perpetual Youth, Aging.

Your doctor may have checked your cholesterol levels and found they were normal. Your blood pressure was normal and you don't smoke, so in that case you have eliminated all three of the major factors you can do something about that contribute to an increase in atherosclerosis. If your blood pressure was high I would suggest treating it to protect you longer. You are now in the age when a woman has to consider these things just as much as a man does, but it sounds like you are doing all right.

'Blue Bird' tales tagged fantastic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "People stare at me and are amazed that I am not a doddering wreck. I feel like Edmund Dantes, just escaped from prison in 'the Count of Monte Cristo.'"

That was George Cukor's wry observation on his return to Hollywood from the already-legendary filming of "The Blue Bird" in Leningrad. So many wild stories came out of the production that Cukor wonders if he was directing the same picture.

"The tales that I read and hear are fantastic," he said. "I was supposed to be directing the picture from a stretcher. Elizabeth Taylor was said to dislike the Russian food so much that she dined every night in Helsinki."

Far from being a stretcher case, George Cukor seems unscarred by the whole experience. At 76 he was doubtless the oldest member of the Russian- American- English movie venture. Yet he seems to have thrived despite the long, troubled production.

"I am certainly not a card-carrying Communist," commented Kukor, whose taste and leanings are decidedly capitalistic. "Nor do I think I am just trying to look on the bright side.

"But really, I found the Russians to be very sweet. They did everything they could to solve our problems, and they were puzzled by the reports that were printed in the Western press. They, of course, are not accustomed to a free press.

"As far as I could determine, there was no spying, no surveilance. I could even kid with the Russsians, asking them not to send me to Siberia if the picture went wrong. They replied, 'Siberia is lovely now.'"

Cukor said the main problem with "The Blue Bird" was that the original coproduction deal arranged by American producer Edward Lewis was underfinanced.

LIBERTY LINES

Oil Company Ripoff

By Robert M. Bartell

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Liberty Lobby News Service)—When the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries recently raised the price of crude they export by 10%, the American public groaned; they'll have to shell out an additional $2 billion a year for gasoline. But the giant oil companies are jubilant; the new hike means additional profits. The only loser is the poor, hard-pressed consumer.

Two years ago the Arab oil lands, Iran and Venezuela quadrupled the price of oil, then nationalized—at confiscatory rates—the oil companies' assets. The public was aghast. It was commonly believed that the consumer was not only saddled with a multi-billion additional burden in the form of higher oil prices, but that the international oil companies were also badly crippled. And, in fact, the loss of the huge oil fields, with their trillions of dollars of proved oil reserves, was a grievous blow to the big companies.

But it was not an immediate financial loss. On the contrary, the oil companies quickly recouped their loss on overseas operations—and went on to make additional, "emergency" profits. For now, thanks to the Great Oil Heist of 1973, the oil they pumped from their American oil fields is fetching three and four times more, and they're making fabulous profits.

The biggest beneficiary has been the giant, Rockefeller-controlled Exxon. Last year the firm, which had changed its name from Esso, perhaps to incorporate the double cross into its title, chalked up a $10.9 billion profit. That is much more than the annual budget of most nations. It paid its corporate ruler, J. Kenneth Jamieson, a salary more than three times President Ford's. With such pickings Exxon is well able to face the fines that might be levied against the company from the anti-trust charges brought by Connecticut, Florida, Kansas and the Federal Trade Commission.

Mobil Oil, another Rockefeller corporation, netted $3.6 billion profit. It also managed to pay only 1.6% federal tax last year—far below the 49% standard corporate tax. Like Exxon, Mobil also faced anti-trust charges, plus multiple air quality violations, environmental violations and oil discharge violations.

Compared with those very adroit corporations, Gulf, the oil company of the fabulous Mellon family, whose profits soared a fantastic 440% during the 1972-74 period, appears "poor but honest," having paid almost 5% federal tax on its $3.9 billion net profit. Gulf also is fighting charges of environmental violations and faces a rap for illegal political contributions.

The multi-national, multi-billion-dollar Texaco empire operates in 84 countries, with its own fleet of 205 tankers and 37,000 miles of pipeline. Last year the company paid less than 2% federal tax on a $2.8 billion net profit!

It appears as if the greasy fingers of the major oil companies are dipping into Uncle Sam's pocket. Judging from my gasoline bill and my tax bill, I'm sure their fingers are in my pocket.

Reader's comments are welcome. Please pass along any points of view to Liberty Lobby, Dept. 10-10, 300 Independence Ave., S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003.

Patients entering state institutions see list of rights

By William Weary
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY Mental health patients voluntarily entering state institutions are now signing an admission form which lists the state's "rights of patients" laws on the back.

The form's final draft was presented last week to mental health facility superintendents by Derek D. Hughes, a deputy director in the Department of Mental Health.

"The form makes our intentions perfectly clear and from a legal point of view it's an improvement over old forms," says Hughes.

He said there had been no problems in the past with patients misunderstanding the terms of their hospitalization, but other states had instituted patients' rights forms and Missouri was following suit.

Previously each facility had its own form. Now all mental health institutions will use the standardized version.

The statutes placed on the back of the form state that a voluntary patient who requests his release shall be allowed to leave provided he is over 16 years of age. A guardian's consent is not necessary.

If a hospital head, through a court order, decides to confine the patient for the patient's or society's safety, his release may not be delayed more than 10 days.

Other statutes cited on the form list certain civil rights to which a patient is entitled, such as mail privileges, voting, and the receiving of visitors. Hospital authorities still are allowed to "determine (when) it is necessary for the medical welfare of the patient to impose restrictions."

Six regulations of state mental institutions requiring the patient's consent before admission are printed on the form's front.

They state the patient "will obey all rules and regulations of said facility" and he "may not leave said facility against the advice or consent of the superintendent . . . without giving 48 hours written notice . . ."

A statute on the back of the form says that within 48 hours of a release request a facility head can file in county probate court "a certification that the release of the patient . . . be postponed for as long as the court . . . determines to be necessary . . . but in no event more than 10 days."

The sixth regulation informs the patient that the facility may wish to contact his family or friends for helpful information during his hospitalization. This is not a breach of confidentiality, authorities say, because the patient can designate which information he doesn't want released.

The new forms contain no agreement for special surgery or treatment (such as electroshock), he says. If a doctor decides such further treatment is necessary, separate consent froms need to be signed by the patient.

Campaign fund-raisers exchange monies

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The chief Missouri fund-raisers for the presidential campaigns of Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan have found a way to obtain more money for their candidates under the new campaign financing laws.

Each is contributing $1,000 to the presidential campaign of the other's candidate.

Leif J. Sverdrup, finance chairman for Ford's campaign in Missouri, contributed $1,000 to Reagan's campaign, and William McBride Love, Reagan's state fund-raiser, gave $1,000 to Ford's campaign.

The tradeoff was prompted by financing laws that forbid an individual from giving more than $1,000 to a candidate.

The St. Louis businessmen said it began as a joke, but that it had a practical purpose — each side received more in contributions.

Sverdrup related that he met Love one day and said to him, "Look here, I need $1,000 from you for President Ford." Love countered that he would be glad to accept the contribution to Reagan, Sverdrup sad, and soon the deal was sealed.

"We each like both candidates," said Love. "Our hope is that there will be no bitterness in the campaigns, no throat-cutting. We are both working for the best interests of our candidates."
